PRESIDENT FRETS AT RESTRAINT

Shows Improvement, but Chafes at Inability to Join in Labor Conference

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 6.—After a satisfactory night President Wilson today continued to hold the improvement that was noted in his condition yesterday.

This was the gist of the bulletin on the President's condition that was issued at the White House at 11:30 o'clock by Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, his personal physician; Dr. Sterling Ruffin of Washington, Mrs. Wilson's family physician, and Rear Admiral E. R. Stitt, head of the Naval Medical College.

Today's bulletin, which was issued following a conference at the White House of the three medical men, marked a change in all previous bulletins on the President's condition, in that it was signed, in addition to Dr. Grayson, by both Dr. Ruffin and Admiral Stitt.

All previous bulletins have been signed by Dr. Grayson alone. There was no particular significance in the Plan U. S. Airship Able to Destroy Any Foreign Navy

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 6.—The military aeronautic division of the army is developing, at Dayton, O., American aircraft capable of the destruction of any navy, Brigadier-General William Mitchell, director-general of the division, today told the House Military Affairs Committee.

"We are developing armored aircraft to fight land troops, but troops can scatter more effectively than ships, and the development of aircraft to fight land troops is difficult," he added.

LIFT EMBARGO ON BRITISH SHIPPING

Washington, Oct. 6.—The embargo on shipments to British ports because was it 'depot storage' [illegible] of the transportation strike has been promptly lifted, announced at the division of operations United States Shipping Board.

All vessels now loaded and awaiting orders to ports of the United Kingdom will be allowed to clear immediately.

London, Oct. 6.—With the same astonishing suddenness which marked the beginning of their strike nine days ago, the railwaymen returned to work today.

The truce negotiated between Premier Lloyd George and a group of conservative labor leaders late Sunday, provides that there shall be a final settlement by October 21, and that there shall be no reduction of railwaymen's wages before September 30, 1920.

The men receive the guarantee from the government that no railway workers are to receive less than about $13.50 weekly, instead of the pre-war wage, so long as the cost of living is not less than 110 per cent. above the pre-war level.

A Tenant for Every Room Every Day in the Year

People who make a business of renting rooms know that a room standing empty, even for a short time, makes a hole in the profits that is hard to make up.

Renting rooms is a highly profitable business when there are no losses of this sort, and there's no need for a single vacancy. You could fill your room ten times over if you knew how to reach the thousands of people who are looking for homelike rooms.

People who advertise their rooms in the AMERICAN are backed up by an out-of-town as well as a city circulation. No wonder the rooms are filled.

PRODUCE MORE; CUT COSTS

This the Way to Improve Labor Conditions, Says W. B. Wilson, Opening Conference

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 6.—There are but two ways by which the general standards of living of the wage workers can be improved, Secretary of Labor Wilson declared this afternoon, in opening the President's round table conference of representatives of capital, labor and the public. These are, he said:

1—"By increased productivity, making more material available for wages.

2—"By taking the means of increased compensation out of profit of the employer.

"If wages are increased and profits remain the same," Secretary Wilson continued, "the burden is passed on to the consuming public in the form of an increased cost of living, and comes back in that form to the wage earner himself. No portion of improved living standards can come out of the profits of the employers, under present conditions, unless there is profiteering.

"The more productive we are the sooner we will replace the wastage of war, return to normal price levels and abolish the opportunity for profiteering. There can be no profiteering where the production is ample to meet the needs of the people of the world, if there is a free flow of material from producers to consumer. It is only when the production is not sufficient for the needs of the people or, when sufficient, where artificial obstructions impede proper distribution that there is any possibility of profiteering.

"Anything that restricts the highest efficiency commensurate with the physical, mental and spiritual well-being of the workers tends to retard the progress of the country as a whole."

FANS IN EARLY RUSH TO 5TH GAME

By NICK FLATLEY.

Comiskey Park, Chicago, Oct. 6.—With the return of ideal baseball weather, there was an early rush of fans to the ball park to see the White Sox and Reds in the fifth game of the World's series today.

The bleachers were filled shortly after noon. Chicago fans still refuse to admit the White Sox are beaten, even though the Reds have the best of the series by three games to one.

Claude Williams was expected to start in the box for the clan of Gleason. Along with Dick Kerr, he started tossing a ball to Ray Schalk shortly after the Sox began limbering up. James and Mayer were also busy getting the kinks out of their arms.

Pat Moran had all his pitchers working out. It was believed, however, that Eller or Reuther would be his final choice.

The day's rest caused by the rain seemed to have a good effect on the players of both clubs, judging by the speed and pep they displayed in the preliminary practice.

The Reds are just chock full of fight. They can't see how they can now lose the series.

Three generations of soldiers met at the reunion, as several of her sons-in-law are Civil War veterans.

Mrs. Walton was born in Seabrook and has lived in the same house for eighty years. Longevity is a feature of her family, her father, Captain David Chase, dying when ninety-one. She was the mother of nine children, of whom five are still living. The eldest is eighty, the youngest sixty-two.

How Mercier Defied Foe

CARDINAL THRILLS HEARERS

Tells Faneuil Hall Audience of His Answer to the Kaiser's Agent

Cardinal Mercier, at the official reception of Boston at Faneuil Hall today, told in graphic phrases how he defied the Germans during their occupation of Belgium.

He said:

"Early in 1915 there came to my house in Belgium, Deputy Trimborn from the German National Assembly, whom I had known for many years through his participation in international church affairs.

"He said, 'I come to you not as a German, but as your friend and a Catholic.

"'Only one of two things can happen in Belgium. She will either be annexed to Germany entirely or allowed to remain in a state of sovereignty such as Bulgaria now is. For this reason I advise you to be more circumspect in your attitude toward our army of occupation.'

"Even at that time I was so confident that our cause would triumph that I replied, 'Give me one minute and I will laugh in my leisure. We will resume our interview after the war.'

"And the German deputy never returned."

Cardinal Mercier was eulogized as one of the greatest characters the world has ever seen, who shielded a whole nation by his fidelity and courage, by Mayor Peters and Cardinal O'Connell.

Before an admiring throng that packed the historic old edifice to its walls and overflowed into the streets, the Mayor and Cardinal extended Boston's welcome to the hero priest of Malines.

Mayor Peters compared him to

Pink-Tie Pastor Asks for Soft Drink, Gets One With "Kick"

New York, Oct. 6.—Adventures of a clergyman on a tour of the saloons of the city, disguised by a pink necktie, were related by Rev. Dr. James Empringham. He is seeking a substitute for the barroom, which he says has been made worthless by prohibition. He said that one result of prohibition is increased difficulty in getting a soft drink in a saloon.

"Under the protection of a pink tie, I slunker through the double-swinging doors of Sixth avenue or Hester street and ask for a ginger ale or birch, as a preliminary mixing with the boys. But now I no longer get the innocuous beverage for which I call.

"The white aproned artist invariably construes my innocent request for ginger ale as a euphonious camouflage for something more potent."

LEAPS OUT OF BUSHES AT VICTIM

Pauline Follette Loses Purse and Pay Check in Holdup on Cambridge Parkway

Eighteen-year-old Pauline Follette was overpowered, beaten and robbed in broad daylight today by a negro on the Charles River parkway. The negro attempted a vicious assault on the young woman, but was beaten off.

Mrs. Follette lives at No. 87 St. Stephen street. She was on her way to work at the Gray & Davis plant in Cambridge.

The attack and robbery took place near the Charlesgate Hospital. The negro spoke to the young woman as she came near a clump of bushes in which he was hiding.

She ignored him and hurried on, at the same time removing a hatpin with which to defend herself. The negro sprang at her and clasped one hand over her mouth. The girl fought desperately to beat off her assailant. He became alarmed by her cries and ran away, after taking her pocketbook, eye and pay check.

Mrs. Follette's hat was torn to ribbons, her skirt partly torn off, and one shoe removed in the struggle. She is now under the care of a physician.

The Cambridge police are making a search. The negro is described by the victim of the attack as about thirty years old and five feet nine inches in height.

fact that the bulletin was signed by all three doctors, Dr. Grayson explained. The signatures of all three were attached, he said, because the bulletin was issued after a consultation at which all three were in agreement as to the President's condition.

The official announcement follows:

"After a consultation at the White House, participated in by Rear-Admiral Cary T. Grayson, Dr. Sterling Ruffin and Rear-Admiral E. R. Stitt, the following bulletin relative to the President's condition was given out:

"The improvement in the President's condition noted yesterday has continued. He had a satisfactory night.

(Signed) "GRAYSON, RUFFIN, STITT."

WORRIED OVER CONFERENCE.

Dr. Grayson said that the President's temperature today was "None too good," but that it was "not bad." This was due mainly to the fact that he was desirous of sending some message to the industrial conference, which he called, and which opened this afternoon.

The President, it was learned at the White house, has fretted considerably over the industrial conference. When the call for the conference was issued, the President had expected to open it himself, and through his personal efforts break down a great deal of the distrust with which leaders of capital and labor are viewing each other.

One of Washington's leading hotels has put a "Wilson salad" on its bill of fare as a result of the President's illness. It is in close proximity to the executive mansion, and the sound of the cowbells, tin boilers and other noise-making devices which featured its selections, was wafted across the way to the executive mansion. At the White House's request the jazz was discontinued and only the regular orchestra now plays.

AIM OF OPTIMISM.

The general air of optimism about the White House was reflected by Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska ranking Democratic member of the Foreign Relations Committee, who was a caller today.

After conferring with Secretary Tumulty, Senator Hitchcock expressed the belief that by the time the "next reservations" to the treaty had been reached the President would be able to direct the battle for the ratification of the document. He said that in his opinion it would be two or three weeks before the remaining amendments would be disposed of. The administration leaders are well aware of the President's attitude on taking amendments Hitchcock stated, and felt confident the Executive would be able, by the time the reservations are reached, to give his advice at least.

HERO PRIMATE COMPARED TO WASHINGTON

Cardinal Mercier Eulogized by Mayor Peters and Cardinal O'Connell

Washington, "a parallel figure, steadfast in adversity and undaunted by passing defeat." Cardinal O'Connell said of the Belgian primate: "He stood for conscience at a moment when the world seemed to have lost its bearing, and pointed to the law of God as a fixed star in the heavens."

Preceding the reception, Cardinal Mercier visited Boston College, where he received a number of donations, including one of $100 from the college for Louvain University. The cardinal was welcomed to the college, and after receiving his gratuities, reposed with the student body on the lawn.

"BRAVEST OF BELGIANS."

The exercises at Boston College took place in the Auditorium, where speeches were made by the guest of honor, Cardinal O'Connell, Rt. Rev. William Devlin, president of the college, and Richard E. Meahane, '20, who spoke for the undergraduates.

Cardinal Mercier was presented $500, the gift of J. J. Higgins of Commonwealth avenue; $100 from Mrs. John McNamara of College road, Newton, and President Devlin announced he would present $100 for Louvain University from Boston College.

In his address of welcome, Richard McShane, who is president of the Fulton Debating Society, greeted Cardinal Mercier as "the light unto the revelation of the Gentiles and the glory of your people of Belgium." He said that millions of years ago Caesar characterized Belgium as the bravest of the brave, and he extolled Cardinal Mercier is the bravest of the Belgians.

President Devlin then told of the growth of Boston College and its policy of combining religious training with intellectual training. He said that intellectual culture alone was not sufficient, as it breeds proud and godless individuals and opens the doors to the very excesses of that false philosophy we fought against together with millions of armed men during the last few years.

"Here, today, you stand," he said "in the halls of a great college established on the sure ground that excellence of intellectual training must be accompanied by true training of the will through the stimulating and teachings of Christ," he said.

POSES WITH STUDENTS.

Cardinal O'Connell said he was especially glad to welcome Cardinal Mercier to Boston College, as it was the speaker's Alma Mater. "As you loved Louvain," said he, "and your heart bled when it was damaged, so my heart would bleed if I thought the foundations of this institution had been weakened."

The speaker referred to the confusion which is prevalent throughout the world, and said that it was in countries where the most splendid endowed universities. It was due he asserted, to the fact that training of the heart and religion were not combined with training of the mind.

Boston College, said Cardinal O'Connell, was too modest to offer any honorary degrees to the distinguished visitor, but the speaker did offer unbounded loyalty and Catholic affection of the institution.

Cardinal Mercier said that he was especially pleased to see such a fine showing of Catholic manhood, and thanked Cardinal O'Connell for welcoming him there. He said that he hoped the students would learn the college motto, "Religion of church and State." The primate again referred to the friendship for the United States during the war, and once more extended the thanks of the Belgian people. He concluded his remarks by extending his benediction to the assembled gathering, after which he posed with the students.

At the conclusion of this visit, the distinguished clergyman was met by the reception committee and escort of cavalry at the Hotel Somerset. Cheers rang from the streets, despite the rain, and enthusiastically cheered the Belgian visitor.

GIVEN DEGREE BY HARVARD.

The party then proceeded to Faneuil Hall by way of Commonwealth avenue, Arlington street, Boylston street, to Tremont street, to School street, to Washington street, to Dock square and Faneuil Hall.

Following the reception, which was witnessed by thousands, Cardinal Mercier was taken to St. John's Seminary, Brighton, for luncheon, which was followed by a reception to the clergy at the same place. Later in the day he was the recipient of a degree from Harvard University, after which he was scheduled to return to the home of Cardinal O'Connell to rest pending his departure from this city at midnight.

Mercier's Unconquerable Soul Won Over Brutality, Says Cardinal O'Connell

Cardinal O'Connell's speech, delivered at the public reception to Cardinal Mercier in Faneuil Hall today, follows:

"Amid the many welcomes offered to Your Eminence during your visit to America, none is more genuine than the welcome which is offered to you by all the citizens of Boston. The whole population of this metropolis of New England rejoices at your presence today in this historic hall.

"Time upon time since its walls were erected they have rung to the noble and sacred sentiment of liberty. Here the oppressor and tyrant have been denounced by a freedom-loving people and the inviolable cause of right for the oppressed of every land has been here upheld and consecrated.

"This hall is a hallowed shrine to us of Boston, and we rejoice that here Boston bids you its heartiest welcome.

"All the world admires those two noblest qualities of man, fidelity to principle and the courage to stand for it.

"When at the very beginning of the great World War the dreadful news was borne to us over the seas that the neutrality of Belgium had been wantonly violated, all eyes were turned toward that noble little land, and every heart was filled with anxiety, wondering what would be the eventful fate of Belgium and the Belgians.

"There met definitely face to face the principle of right and the power of might. Which was finally to win, was the tremendous question which rose to every lip.

STOOD AGAINST INJUSTICE AND OPPRESSION

"At first we saw with pride and admiration the comparatively small Belgian Army confronting the great Hercules of military strength and prowess. We followed step by step the heroic advance, the awful shock of arms and then the equally heroic retreat, as the gigantic force of organized militarism plowed its ruthless way through the slender army which was all that Belgium had to offer in its own defence.

"Then it seemed the story was ended. Might had triumphed and the Kingdom of Belgium was reduced to a little stretch of sandy beach between Dunkirk and Calais.

"Just when it appeared that all was over with Belgium a mighty voice was heard, a voice far more powerful than that of kings or arms; it is the voice of Belgium's Primate lifted in God's own name against injustice and unlawful oppression of a small nation.

"Like a true shepherd of his flock, he stood in their midst and, fearless of whatever might befall him, defended his own people. He had neither arms, nor cannon, nor cavalry, but he had an unconquerable soul, and with apostolic fortitude he defied the brute force of might, and finally defeated that which force of arms had failed to conquer.

SHIELDED A NATION BY COURAGE AND FIDELITY

"He stood for conscience at a moment when the world seemed to have lost its bearing, and pointed to the law of God as a fixed star in the heavens. He shielded a whole nation by his fidelity and courage.

"At the very moment when the unthinking were crying out that religion had failed, he made it clear that religion was the only thing that could never fail. Once again as a proof to all the world for all time he demonstrated that the greatest strength of civilization is the law of God.

"All honor to the prowess of Belgium's heroic army. Her example and her steadfastness in the hour of trial will be forever sung in the annals of patriotism. All honor, too, to Belgium's Primate, who, like the Christian bishops of the early centuries of the church, stood unflinchingly before the world's tyrants and bade them remember that there is a God who rules the destinies of humanity, who is a defender of the weak and who chasties the strong who dare to defy His eternal laws.

"Your Eminence's noble example will serve forever to stimulate in the hearts of all humanity the noblest sentiments of which the heart is capable—love of God and love of country.

"So, Your Eminence, the people of Boston bid you a heartiest welcome."

MAYOR LAUDS MERCIER AS MARTYR

One of Greatest Characters Ever Sent Into World, He Says, in Faneuil Hall

Mayor Peters, in his address, said:

"Two great figures have emerged from the clouds of war that lately overhung Belgium. One of these is a gallant king, the other is the distinguished bishop who honors Boston with his presence today.

"What a privilege it is to welcome such a man, to meet him face to face, to speak to him out of the fulness of our hearts, and even at the risk of embarrassing his modesty, to recall the tragic drama in which he played so eminent a part!

"When Cardinal Mercier returned from Rome to his desolated country and published his Christmas pastoral, a new and great character was suddenly revealed to the world. We saw an austere churchman, like some prophet of Israel, hurling a heroic challenge at the spoilers and tormentors of his people. His eloquence thrilled us. His clear, strict definitions seemed to lay out the boundaries of two hostile kingdoms before us. On the real war was to get. On one side power, clanking its spurs and trailing its sabre; on the other side justice, stripped naked and bound hand and foot, as to a column.

CONVICTED CONQUERORS.

"How superbly he illuminated the issue! How easily he convicted the conquerors of their essential inferiority and blasted and shriveled their pretensions with the white flame of his righteous indignation! How victoriously he kept alive the image of the Belgian nation so that the whole world might see that its nobility preserved intact beneath the coarse mask of an alien sovereignty!

"After the first pastoral there followed that sublime series of documents in which he dissected sophistry and clarified the moral law, enunciating its precepts in chiseled sentences that will be read by letters inscribed on a granite shaft.

"In one he rebuked the oppressors for some of the refinement of cruelty, in another he appealed to his fellow-bishops in Germany for a judicial test of the German calumnies. In still another he celebrated the valor of the Belgian common soldier, who had offered his breast as a living rampart for the protection of his country. Always he was the pillar of comfort in his wellnigh-despairing people.

"Standing in their midst, not shielding his own head from blows, rather exposing it so as to attract the fury of the enemy to himself, he drew courage from the deep wells of religious conviction and from his own indomitable spirit and showered it among the people in fine copious, invigorating streams. His altar at Malines was a beacon light for all New England. His name was the Belgians' rallying cry.

LIKE WASHINGTON.

"While America followed his course, we thought of Washington, a parallel figure, steadfast in adversity and undaunted by passing defeat. We remembered that he, like Cardinal Mercier, was the spokesman of a people small in numbers but great in spirit and in destiny. We thought of Lincoln, purified by the sufferings of a whole nation and bearing his long martyrdom with a kindred serenity.

"Cardinal Mercier has crossed the ocean to express to us, as he says, his appreciation of our sympathy and the outflow of the resources of relief still necessary for his exhausted nation. His visit reminds us of that which he is so fond of calling, in his words, our still unpaid debt to Belgium.

"It is a debt of which we are glad to be reminded, a debt of honor and of gratitude. We invite Cardinal Mercier to spread before us in full view the record of his country and assure him that we welcome the privilege of co-operating with him in this work of restoration.

"We ask him, moreover, to take back to his fellow-countrymen a message of special sympathy from the citizens of Boston. We, too, like the Belgians, have a tradition of political independence, which we preserve as a sacred heritage. Our city was named in the American Revolution and in the momement for the emancipation of the slaves, and played no small part in the crusade that sent two million soldiers across the seas to fight for the liberation of Belgium.

"SENT BY PROVIDENCE.

"This provincial hall is charged with the atmosphere of civic freedom. Its simple lines express the rectitude, some would say the severity, of our inherited principles. These patriots, whose portraits are seen on the walls —Adams, Webster, Sumner, Wendell Phillips, join silently in our welcome. Puritans as they were, they would leave their frames if they could and step to the platform and take this great Cardinal by the hand.

"It is not out of curiosity that we, their successors, are assembled here or to utter formal phrases of official compliment. Our greetings, I trust, carry their own evidence of spontaneity, however inadequate the expression may be. We have long agreed among ourselves upon this tribute of esteem, which your visit, eminent sir, now enables us to pay publicly, and directly.

"These few hours of personal contact will linger in our memories as the consummation of a spiritual intercourse that dates back to the months of the European war. We greet you as one of those ideal figures that Providence sends on earth once in so often to inspire lesser men and lift them up to the heights of their great example. We congratulate the country that has found in you a living monument to rejoice the edifices of brick and stone destroyed by the invaders. I am proud to be the spokesman of Boston in offering to Belgium and its illustrious champion our fullest measure of love and honor and admiration."

Memorial to Noble Work of Mercier Presented Him by Belgian Relief Fund

The following text was delivered today to Cardinal Mercier by the executive committee of the New England Belgian Relief Fund:

"To His Eminence Cardinal Mercier

"Your Eminence—To all the persons who are in any wise acquainted with those episodes of the great war which form the main portion of Belgium, your presence in the United States of America is the occasion of profound interest and rejoicing.

"They are moved by every sentiment of respect, admiration and esteem for the exemplification of the loftiest and most holy Christian virtues in your own person and character, and the fame of that thin opportunity has come to them of expressing their appreciation.

"Among such persons, we beg leave to assure, Your Eminence, there are none who can feel more strongly the desire to give you every expression of their loyal devotion than the subscribers hereto who were all privileged in their humble way to minister to the dire needs, and to help in alleviating the distress of the brave and determined Belgian people.

"Gathered to the light for all New England Belgian Fund, a voluntarily organization established in October, 1914, by women, children and other non-combatants, and having its headquarters in Boston, for our service, and the least of very generous contributors to our fund, scattered throughout the whole of New England, do sign this memorial, and present it may be accepted by Your Eminence in lasting remembrance of the inspiration which we have all received from the words and works of your illustrious prince, and as testimonial to the wonderful power of your influence towards great and noble ends, the re-establishment of peace, justice and liberty.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH PLANS TO BAR REMARRYING OF DIVORCED

5 BISHOPS BEHIND MOVE

Radical Change in Canon Law to Be Proposed at General Convention

By THE REV. DR. E. CLOWES CHORLEY,
Historiographer of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of New York.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 6.—No person divorced for any cause whatsoever can be married in the future by any clergyman of the Episcopal church, if the report of a joint committee on holy matrimony is approved by the general convention of the Protestant Episcopal church, which opens its sessions here on Wednesday next.

This report, which is signed by five bishops and some of the influential clergy and laity, recommends the amendments of the present canon so as to read:

NO MARRIAGE SOLEMNIZED.

"No marriage shall be solemnized in this church between parties, either of whom has husband or wife still living, who has been divorced for any cause arising after marriage."

The Rev. Dr. Leighton Parks, rector of St. Bartholomew's Church, New York city, presents a minority report which reads:

"No minister knowingly, after due inquiry, shall solemnize the marriage of any person who has been or is the husband or the wife of any other person then living from whom he or she has been divorced."

CHANGES CHURCH LAW.

In the general convention of 1916 similar proposals were carried by the clerical vote in the house of deputies, but the lay delegates defeated them by a small majority.

Under the law of the church as it now stands the innocent party in a divorce may be married by an Episcopal clergyman provided the bishop gives his approval after an examination of the court records in the case. Even then, no clergyman is compelled to officiate at such a marriage and most clergymen will not do so.

The new canon treats the innocent and guilty alike and makes the marriage of any divorced person impossible in the Episcopal Church.

MODEL IS SUING UNDERTAKER AND WIFE

Charges Prominent Pepperell Churchman Has Alienated Affections of Her Husband

Two alienation suits, unique in the annals of Massachusetts law, was started today before Judge White, in Superior Court, when Mrs. Helen W. Crawford of Boston began two $25,000 actions against Rolan H. Blood of Pepperell and his wife, Marie Louise Blood.

Mrs. Crawford, a suit model, living at No. 34 St. Botolph street, charges that Blood, a prosperous undertaker, stole her husband's affections. The Bloods are highly respected in Pepperell and the husband is prominent in church affairs.

Guy L. Harden, attorney for Mrs Crawford, told Judge and jury that some of the testimony that would be introduced would be "almost unbelievable, unless supported by facts." He said that letters written by Blood to Crawford would be put in evidence, which would establish the facts beyond doubt.

As a result of the conditions, according to Attorney Hardan, Mrs. Crawford was called on to undergo neglect, want and humiliation. She will attempt to show that she was twice deserted by Crawford, who left her for Blood's company, and to prove that he admitted the facts to her, and became so enraged when she referred to them—that he cut her allowance to $2 a week.

Mrs. Crawford in her allegation, states she married Crawford in St. Joseph's Church, Roxbury, December 28, 1913. They lived happily until her husband fell under Blood's influence, she charges, when Crawford became "cold and indifferent to her," cutting her allowance and leaving her for weeks at a time. Of all these facts she charges Mrs. Marie Louise Blood was aware.

TRY MAN FIRST IN BROADWELL MYSTERY

Case Against George A. Long and Mrs. Parker of Barre Opens Tomorrow

Montpelier, Vt., Oct. 6.—With a panel of seventy-nine men on hand from wrom to draw jurors, the trial of George A. Long and Mrs. Isabel Parker, charged with the murder of Mrs. Lucina A. Broadwell, opens tomorrow morning.

The trial, which begins at 9 o'clock, will take place in the Washington County Court in this city, with Judge Fred N. Butler of Rutland on the bench.

The nude body of Mrs. Broadwell, mother of three children, was found in a garden off Pearl street, Barre, on Sunday morning, May 4. The woman's hands were bound behind her back and she had been strangled. A man's handkerchief bearing a laundry mark, was tied about her neck.

Long, a teamster and mechanic, thirty-nine years old, with a prison record for forgery, admitted after many denials that Mrs. Broadwell was in his company at the home of Mrs. Parker until midnight May 3. He claimed she left him at that time and started home.

Long and Mrs. Parker, an aged rooming-house keeper, were arrested May 15 and later were indicted.

According to the plans of Attorney-General Frank C. Archibald of Manchester, Long will be tried first. It is expected that it will last from three to five weeks, as there will be a great amount of circumstantial evidence to be presented.

Judge Butler will have as associates Assistant Judges George H. Dale and Charles H. Dana. Attorney-General Archibald will be assisted by State's Attorney Earl R. Davis of Barre, who conducted the preliminary inquiry.

As Long has no funds the State has assigned J. Ward Carver of Barre City to defend him. It is expected that Mr. Carver will be assisted by Richard A. Hoar and Judge Allan G. Fay.

Mrs. Broadwell was the twenty-nine-year-old wife of Harry E. Brbadwell, a carpenter. On the night of her death her husband gave her money with which to purchase provisions. After making a visit to the stores, Mrs. Broadwell returned to her home about 9:30 and told her father, George Cousens, that she was going to a theatre.

Broadwell told the police he spent the evening in a saloon and after it closed visited a dance hall and other places. He was asleep when the police came to tell him that his wife was dead.

Rose Palkey and Francisco Martines, who were in the Parker House on the night in question, were arrested.

Washington, Oct. 6.—The Fall term of the Supreme Court of the United States was opened this afternoon. All the justices were present, but no decisions were announced. Because of the illness of President Wilson the court abandoned its custom of calling on the President.

Attorney-General Palmer and Solicitor-General King moved to advance the government liquor case to test the validity of 2.75 per cent. beer, the appeal coming from a decision of Federal Judge Rose of the Baltimore Circuit Court.

DESCENDANT OF POET DIES OF INJURIES

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow of Allston Unconscious From Time of Auto Crash

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, a descendant of the poet Longfellow and of the Adams family, the latter of early New England pioneer fame, died at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Brighton, today, as a result of injuries received Saturday night when his automobile collided with a street car at Allston street and Commonwealth avenue, Allston. He died without regaining consciousness. Mrs. Longfellow, who received slight injuries at the time of the accident, is prostrated with grief at her home, No. 15 Belle Vesta street.

Longfellow was born in Allston thirty-seven years ago, the son of the late Henry Wadsworth Longfellow and Mary F. Gilbert Longfellow. He was prominent in the real estate exchanges, having built some of the best residences in the Corey Hill district.

Aside from several toy inventions, Longfellow had several novel ideas relative to flying machines, and it is claimed that he was the first man in Massachusetts to build a working model aeroplane. The machine was exhibited in Maine.

Nine years ago Longfellow visited Paris and purchased an aeroplane which was piloted in the Chicago flight eight years ago by Earl Oxington. A year later the same plane was entered in events at Squantum, piloted by Joseph Cummings.

Longfellow was a prominent member of the Boston Lodge of Elks. Besides a wife he is survived by three children, Henry Wadsworth, Jr., Earl and Elsie.

His sister Anna was to have been married last Saturday and Longfellow was to have been best man.

Hagerty put on more speed, and escaped. The highwaymen fired two shots after him.

LADY CARBERY OF DUBLIN ASKS DIVORCE

Chambermaids in Paris Hotels to Figure in Action Against Irish Nobleman

By International News Service.

London, Oct. 6.—Testimony by hotel chambermaids in Paris will play an important part in the latest divorce case in high life—the suit entered at Dublin by Lady Carbery, wife of Lord John Evans-Freke Carbery, the celebrated Irish nobleman.

This testimony, which is being taken by a commission in the French capital, will not be made public, however. A bill for the dissolution of the marriage will be presented in the House of Peers after Parliament convenes on October 22.

Sir Charles Russell, attorney for Lady Carbery, in moving the appointment of the commission to take testimony, said that evidence was wanted from a Spanish chambermaid, a French chambermaid, and a Swiss hotel porter in Paris.

The couple have been living apart, and there is one child to the marriage. Lord Carbery, who is twenty-seven years old, served in the royal naval air service, and was injured in a flying accident in Belgium in September, 1914. He was the first British peer to fly across the English Channel. Lady Carbery, before her marriage, was Miss Joss Metcalf of London.

RUSH OF APPLICANTS FOR POLICE POSITIONS

Lowering of the physical standards for the new police force resulted in a rush of applicants today. Twenty-three were accepted before noon by the preliminary examining board, and certified to the Civil Service Commission. The requirements have been considerably modified. The age limits are twenty-two to thirty-five years, instead of twenty-five to thirty-three. The weight qualification is 135 pounds, instead of 140, and the height requirement 5 feet 7 inches, instead of 5 feet 8.

TO SELL CANDY AT ARMY STORES

Carload of Sweets Is Expected Soon; Rain Makes Day's Work Easy

In spite of threatening weather, a large crowd today flocked to the army supply store, 10 Canal street, South Boston. Many were without umbrellas, and when the rain began about 9:45 a considerable number left.

This circumstance brought about the first let-up in the rushing business which has been done by the army store since its opening.

The practice of closing the doors after a certain number had entered and waiting upon those before admitting more was temporarily suspended.

Colonel Wait, in charge of the stores, expects to soon place on sale a carload of candy.

Saturday the store did a cash business of $6,281.26, while the Worcester branch took in $2,598.11. This despite the fact that Saturday was a short day, 9:30 a. m. to 1 p. m.

Four carloads of reclaimed shoes are on their way here and will be placed on sale at $1 per pair. A large shipment of Winter underwear has also been ordered from Washington.

The tremendous which has so far been done is causing a shortage of articles. An exception to this exists in the case of canned meats, of which ample quantities are on hand. Word has already been received to the effect that more rice and dried beans are to be sent here.

Lieutenant-Colonel H. B. Barry is in charge this.

Today's receipt of mail orders numbered 3,500.

A new branch establishment is to be opened in Providence, R. I., within a short time. This branch will be under the supervision of Major C. J. Malkenthal.

MISS O'CONNOR AGAIN CHOSEN PHONE HEAD

President of Boston Union Elected in Convention to International Office

Miss Julia A. O'Connor has been re-elected president of the Telephone Operators' Department of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers at New Orleans, in convention, Saturday. Miss May Matthews, who decided not to run for president in opposition to Miss O'Connor, was not elected to any office in the union. Miss O'Connor's new term is for two years. She is also president of the Boston Telephone Operators' Union.

The new secretary, elected to occupy the position formerly held by Miss Matthews, is Miss Mabel Leslie of Portland, Oregon. She will be located at telephone headquarters, in the Tremont Building. Miss Doris Meakin of Winnepeg, Miss Matthews' choice of a candidate to run in opposition to Miss O'Connor, was overwhelmingly defeated.

Other officials of the union elected at the convention were: Treasurer, Miss Mary B. Quinn of Springfield; Miss Teresa Sullivan of Boston, first vice-president; Miss May June, member of the executive board.

Boston Telephone Union officials attending the convention were: Mary Mahoney of "toll," Loretta Baker of "Main," Birdie Powers, also of "Main," Frances Van Tassel of "Fort Hill" and Mary Meaher of "toll."

MEAT PRICES MAY BE ADVANCED ONCE MORE

Washington, Oct. 6.—Increased prices of meats may follow a meeting today between representatives of the packing and fertilizer industries with members of the price-fixing committee of the Department of Agriculture. Wide reductions in the prices of fertilizer were proposed by the price-fixing committee to the representatives of the industries. The department has authority to put such reductions into effect. Since the fertilizers are by-products of the packing industry, it was considered that prices of meats might be boosted to absorb the price reductions in fertilizer.

WOMEN DARE TO HEAR DIVORCE TESTIMONY

Warned by Judge, Three Retain Seats While Others Leave Courtroom

Despite Judge King's warning that women should not remain in the Suffolk County Court room today because of the nature of the evidence in the divorce suit of Mrs. Ethel Mitchell Christensen against her husband, Raymond A. Christensen, three women spectators refused to leave their seats.

"I think it is improper for you women to sit here listening to this testimony," remarked Judge King as the more modest women filed out of the courtroom."

The case was the first on the three weeks' divorce calendar which began today. Mrs. Christensen has been living apart from her husband since 1918.

Testimony was given by Patrolman Morris W. Sullivan, on duty in Brighton, but temporarily detached, and Officer Burley of a spectacular midnight raid on a house on Commonwealth Avenue on January 22. It is here where Christensen was alleged to have been found in company with another woman not his wife. According to the police, Christensen claimed to have made the acquaintance of the woman while attending a theatre.

Christensen's attorney made the allegation that his client's wife's people, who are reported to be wealthy, have tried to bring about a separation because the attorney said, they claimed Christensen was poor. Mrs. Christensen's family is now living in Skowhegan, Me. They have one child, William Raymond.

TIRPITZ ADMITS ITALY KEPT HER PROMISE

GERMANY BROKE PACT BY WAR AGAINST FRANCE

VON TIRPITZ MEMOIRS

By ALFRED VON TIRPITZ,
Grand Admiral of the German Navy.

The turmoil which was stirring Europe and allowed no clear view of the situation as a whole seemed to be subsiding as late as July 30, 1914. England had agreed to mediation proposals formulated by the Emperor, which had also been acceptable to Vienna. I was informed at noon of July 31, through a communication from the Kaiser, which again allowed me to breathe freely, that we had come to complete agreement with London.

However, in the early morning hours of July 31st, before I received this communication from the Emperor, I had been informed by the Admiralty that the Foreign Office considered war unavoidable, and that Jagow had asked whether we were ready to attack the British fleet. Although the two reports were contradictory I was, of course, inclined to trust first the Kaiser, until between noon and 1 o'clock p. m. I heard the news of the Russian mobilization. This gave color to the Foreign Office view of the situation.

At half past twelve the Chancellor sent for me. He had received an imperial notice of the "threatening war danger." I called his attention to the communication I had received from the Kaiser stating that complete accord existed between Berlin and London. He did not yet know of this and was of the opinion that in writing it the Emperor had confused several elements.

Bethmann-Hollweg declared that the Russian ultimatum was such an unheard-of measure against us that we could not possibly put up with it. He argued that if Russia continued to mobilize we must do likewise and that to prevent our getting too far behind we should dispatch an ultimatum to the Czar. I agreed with this view.

The blood guiltiness of those responsible for the Russian mobilization is not lessened by the blundering on the part of our government. In spite of the agreement which in the last hour had been reached with England, unless a miracle occurred, war had become inevitable through the Russian mobilization. Any further hesitation on our part would have thrown open to the Russians the gates of our territory and would have been inexcusable.

In reality the Russians had been mobilizing since July 25th and their start on us worked greatly to our detriment when once the machinery of war was set in motion.

I urged that in the ultimatum to the Czar we again emphasize the fact that full accord seemed imminent and that favorable mediation was already in progress. The Chancellor was greatly put out by this suggestion and declared that this statement had been made repeatedly and that Russia's reply had been to mobilize. I have often thought since then that the Kaiser might have done well to send someone to Petersburg, although the most capable man for the mission, von Hintze, was then in Mexico. I have positive knowledge that the Czar himself fully believed that neither Germany nor Russia, but only the other powers, could gain anything by our mutual destruction. It may be that I overestimated the power of the Czar and underestimated Pan-Slavism, but relying more upon my feelings than upon my reason, I urged the insertion of a peace-furthering paragraph in the ultimatum. It would at least have put the responsibility for what followed more fully upon our enemies.

On August 1, I learned, from the Bundesrat conference, that a declaration of war had followed our ultimatum to Russia. We here lost an opportunity to put to diplomatic advantage the fact of our being on the military defensive against Russia, by not leaving it to Russia to declare war. We should not have inflamed the "moujik" with the conviction that the Kaiser meant to attack the White Czar. We also should have remembered that our alliance with Rumania and with Italy had been drawn up by Prince Bismarck for defensive purposes. Both states were under obligation to assist us only if France or Russia should attack us. By our declaration of war against Russia we formally gave Rumania the right of demanding us in war, as later we gave Italy by our declaration of war against France.

(Editor's Note: The statement is a full admission that Germany's claims that Rumania and Italy were false to their treaties are unfounded. It is evident that in a similar situation Germany would have severed her alliance (if it had seemed to be to her advantage.)

I had the impression at the time that we were proceeding in a foolhardy manner and that our operations were absolutely unconsidered. I was intensely reluctant that we, who in reality were the attacked, should, because of the lawyers in the Foreign Office, bear the odium before the world of being the aggressors. ESPECIALLY AS WE COULD NOT INTEND MARCHING INTO RUSSIA.

(Editor's Note: Von Tirpitz's logic is rather peculiar. It appears that if Germany had been able to carry the attack into Russia he would have had no scruples about declaring war.)

I therefore asked the Chancellor why it was necessary to declare war at the same moment we ordered the mobilization. He replied it was necessary because the army chiefs intended at once to send troops across the frontier. I was astonished me, because at the most it could only be a question of parole. But in those days Bethmann was so nervous it was impossible even to speak to him. I can see him now, wringing his hands, as he cried out over and over again, that it was necessary to declare war.

When I asked Moltke how far the desire to send troops over the frontier had necessitated our declaration of war he told me that there had been no intention of actually crossing the frontier.

I have never solved the riddle of why we were the first to declare war. It probably was due to extreme conscientiousness which forbade even to defend ourselves without first making a formal declaration. Our side Germany this train of thought cannot be comprehended.

(Editor's Note: In the light of Germ.n atrocities, breeches of international law and disregard of the rights of neutrals such a statement appears ludicrous. It is probable that von Tirpitz wrote it for home consumption, and never expected any but a German to take it seriously.)

In the afternoon of August 1, I was summoned to be present at the imperial singing of the declaration of war, but owing to a block of traffic I arrived too late for the formal ceremony. I learned, however, that the formal acceptance of the declaration by Russia had not yet been received, and I even then urged the sending of a conciliatory telegram in the hopes that there was still time to save peace before the Russians accepted our declaration.

In view of Moltke's statement that not even patrols would cross the border for several days, I asked whether actual hostilities were to be opened without the Russian acceptance of our declaration. I pointed out that there was no need for us to appear the aggressor.

This question was set aside by a telegram from Lichnowsky, German ambassador to Great Britain, which gave us the impetus for a new effort toward peace. In this situation I heartily supported the chancellor and answered him in the affirmative when he asked me whether we could promise England not to attack the French coast.

However, it presently appeared that Lichnowsky had been the victim of a misunderstanding and our assurance of not attacking the French coast was of no avail.

INVASION OF BELGIUM PLANNED.

During the night of August 1-August 2, our dispute over the declaration of war was repeated, this time in respect to France. The chancellor was of the opinion that we must at once declare war on France, as we intended marching through Belgium. I remarked that I still failed to understand our declaration of war on Russia at the same time as our mobilization order, and that I could see no reason for declaring war on France until we marched into France itself.

I referred to reports from the Ambassador in London, according to which the marching through Belgium would be the immediate cause of war with England, and I touched on the possibility of the army being able to abandon the march through Belgium.

Moltke declared there was no other way. I then declared we must be prepared for an immediate war with England. Every day was a gain for the mobilization of the navy. For that reason the communication must be made to Belgium as late as possible.

All agreed to wait until the second day of mobilization. This, however, was not done. I was ignorant of the fact that on July 29 Bethmann-Hollweg had already disclosed to the British Ambassador, and thereby to all the Entente nations, our aim to Belgium, the possibility of military operations in Belgium. This was done in the hope of preserving friendly relations with England, despite a continental war.

The impression of lack of leadership in our political administration became more and more alarming. The march through Belgium was undertaken as though it wash not a previously determined measure. Since the Russian mobilization the Chancellor appeared like a drowning man. While the lawyers at the Foreign Office were occupied with the absorbing problem as to whether or not we were legally at war with Russia, it came to light incidentally that we had forgotten to ask ourselves whether she would fight with us against Russia. It was essential to do this without loss of time. Italy, also, had not been apprised of our declaration against Russia.

In fact great anxiety was caused by Austria's slowness in declaring war against Russia and her invasion of Serbia. As late as the forenoon of August 4, the Navy Office urged the Foreign Office, on account of our ships in the Mediterranean, to bring about Austria's belated declaration of war. To my horror Moltke told me that if the Austrians drew back we would be obliged to make a peace at any price.

The Serbian question had been terribly mismanaged. To declare war on Serbia without invading her and to negotiate about a pledge we did not possess was ridiculous. If the invasion had been intended, it should have taken place the moment the ultimatum expired. Before the Serbians had time to blow up the bridges, Belgrade should have been occupied, and negotiations begun only after guarantees had been seized.

We had no control over the Austrians either as regarded the Balkan ultimatum or the world war.

To return to the declaration of war on France, hasted discussions over the question took place between Moltke and Hollweg in the presence of the Kaiser and myself. Moltke pointed out many hostile acts on the part of the French and declared that war had actually begun and that its development was not to be impeded. I could see no excuse for a formal declaration. Even without one, our armies could at least march to the French frontier.

The Chancellor said that without a declaration of war on France he could not present a summons to Belgium. This reasoning still remains dark to me.

The Belgian question itself, however, should have been handled with the greatest caution and tact. For years the general staff had seriously considered the possibility of a march through Belgium, in fact ever since the French revenge policy had begun to rely on the Russian armies for aid, there could be no doubt in the whole world that in a Franco-German war, the French were at the least the intellectual aggressors.

In defence against a French war of revenge which threatened us on the Vistula as well as on the Meuse and the Moselle, our marching through neutral Belgium could only appear justifiable in the eyes of the world if the political offensive of France was an undoubted fact.

The General Staff, in the years just preceding the war, felt that France and England would attack us through Belgium. This was at least a possibility although as a matter of fact France attacked us, as Schoffer always said she would, through Lorraine.

As the Chancellor was aware of the proposed march through Belgium he should have prepared the way diplomatically and at least refrained from a declaration of war, thus making us appear the aggressors before the world. The march through Belgium, because of weak diplomacy, was put into the fatal light of a brutally illegal proceeding.

Bethmann - Hollweg's "House of Cards," the German-English understanding, is smashed. Despite British warnings Germany thought England would remain neutral. England was willing to grant Austria diplomatic victory, but could not countenance defeat of Russia. At peace Germany could have gained her desired economical and political position.

TROOPS GUARD STEEL MILLS AT GARY

Strikers Put on Extra Pickets in Effort to Keep Loyal Men from Work

By International News Service.

Chicago, Oct. 6.—Following a night of rioting in East Chicago and Gary, Ind., State militiamen are today guarding all approaches to steel plants in these cities, prepared to enforce martial law at the first sign of a clash between non-union steel workers and strikers.

Expecting serious trouble when the mill operators attempt to carry out their promise to reopen the mills today in the face of threats by union leaders to oppose to the utmost any effort to reopen the mills," Adjutant-General Harry B. Smith of Indiana is keeping close watch on the situation, armed with an order for martial law.

Strike leaders have greatly increased the number of pickets at the various mills. Eight companies of militia are now at Indiana Harbor with one battalion at Gary.

Klem D. Dunness, a hog in the American Sheet & Tinplate mill at Gary, was reported dying today of a gunshot wound suffered Sunday night in a clash between several hundred strikers and special deputies at the plant.

According to the authorities more than 300 strikers, mostly foreigners, planned storming the plant and to force their way past the guards to drag out non-union workers. The strikers were met at the gate of the plant by a squad of special guards and battle followed during which several were injured.

Senate Committee Will Carry Its Investigation to the Pittsburgh District

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 6.—The Senate committee investigating the steel strike has voted definitely to carry its investigation to the Pittsburgh district, Senator Kenyon of Iowa, chairman of the committee, announced today.

Senator Kenyon stated that as yet he had been unable to determine when the committee would go, as the entire matter hinges on the treaty situation in the Senate.

It is the purpose of the committee to hear about eight of the strikers while in Pittsburgh and also to hear an equal number of non-strikers, Senator Kenyon said. The committee will also visit the steel plants and will make an investigation of the living conditions of the steel workers.

Pittsburgh Plants Open for Work; Report Large Numbers of Men Returning

By International News Service.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 6.—Steel plants in the Pittsburgh district, closed since the beginning of the nation-wide strike two weeks ago, threw open their gates today. Early reports from different sections say that workmen returned in large numbers.

One of the three great blast furnaces of the United States Steel Corporation at Clairton which have been "down" was "blown in" today.

Four large mills in Donora and Monessen, which had been closed tight by the strike, started today. Officials expected that at least 60 per cent. of their employes would return.

The Carnegie Steel Company reported that the largest force since the beginning of the strike reported for duty on the night shift at its different plants.

Two hundred and fifty policemen were stationed at the plants of the National Tube Company and the Jones & Loughlin Company in this city early today, after it had been reported that trouble was threatened.

The shooting at a street car filled with workers and the arrest of 20 pickets marked the resumption of operations in the Monessen plant. No one was hurt by the shots, only one of which hit the car.

"Every American reported for work," an official of one of the plants said.

The strikers' committee is marking time. Activity at headquarters apparently was restricted because of the presence in Washington of all the leaders who will confer tonight with the executive council of the American Federation of Labor on ways and means of conducting the strike.

DENOUNCES LEAGUE AS ALLIANCE WITH PAGANS

"The scheme of the League of Nations endangers the liberties of nations and the peace of the world. Christianity is making an alliance with Paganism, and the counsel of God is set aside," declared Evangelist E. L. Carder in his lecture at Jordan Hall on "Japan, the League and the Next War." The speaker said "that so far as we have learned, prayer was never offered nor the counsel of God sought in the hour when nations, great or small, were blindly groping around the council board of Paris. While the professed Christian nations are not bubbling over with righteousness, yet we profess to believe in the supreme rulership of the God of our fathers. Now, can a league or partnership of nations succeed when unholy alliance is formed with paganism?"

Pretty Boston Girl Causes Envy As Prince's Guest

The luckiest girl in Boston—to hear lots of other misses talk—was Miss Anna Hamlin, daughter of Charles S. Hamlin of the Federal Reserve Board. She accompanied Prince Leopold in his automobile journey to Harvard and back.

"Who's the pretty girl in pink?" was the question asked all along the line. Miss Hamlin motored to the Stadium, which the prince pronounced "magnificent," and then to the freshman dormitories. Spec. A. D. and Porcellian Clubs. It was the latter club that his father, then Prince Albert, visited in 1898.

Accompanying the couple were John W. Hallowell, class of 1901 at Harvard, who was in charge of the prince's visit to the university.

KING AND QUEEN SEE WONDERS OF NIAGARA

Elizabeth Takes Number of Close-Up Views of Falls With Camera

Buffalo, N. Y. Oct. 6.—King Albert, Queen Elizabeth and the Belgian Crown Prince today viewed Niagara Falls, one of America's greatest scenic wonders.

The royal party were dressed in heavy storm coats and crowded as near as possible to get a close-up view. The weather was bright and Queen Elizabeth took a number of pictures with her camera.

Dressed in bright yellow oilskins, the royal visitors were taken under the falls into the Cave of the Winds. While the King was struggling into a pair of overshoes for a trip through the cave, one of the American guides called out:

"All right, King!"

"All right!" shouted Albert in reply, laughing at the informality of the greeting.

One of the first things the King did upon his arrival from Boston at 8:30 was to inquire for the latest news on President Wilson's condition. Upon being informed that it had improved overnight the King remarked cheerfully to the Queen:

"Here is good news indeed. The President is better."

A great crowd welcomed the royal visitors here and at Niagara Falls, and gave them noisy ovations. The King spoke in Buffalo this afternoon, and visited the manufacturing district.

King Albert Moved by Greeting Given by Boston; Receives Harvard Degree

Boston's welcome to the King and Queen of the Belgians was a truly royal one. From the moment of their arrival at the South Station until their departure early in the evening they were greeted with a warmth that recalled the reception accorded Admiral Dewey in Boston after he had smashed the Spanish fleet in Manila Bay.

There's something compelling in the personality of King Albert and there's a magnetic charm to the Queen that is irresistible.

Unquestionably the most impressive event of the day was the conferring of the honorary degree of doctor of laws upon King Albert.

The degree was given to the King while he was a guest of Harvard University at a reception held in the faculty room at University hall. The reception was attended by professors and assistant professors of the various faculties of the university and many State and city executives.

The afternoon reception at the Copley Plaza was attended by about 250 persons. It was held in the reception room adjoining the ballroom.

The King cordially acknowledged the greetings of those presented to him. On one of these occasions a representative of the Boston American after having taken him by the hand, asked him how he liked what little he had seen of Boston and he replied:

"Your city, your country and your men and women are wonderful—and the children, God bless them."

Powell Estate Inventoried

An inventory of the estate of J. Alfred Powell of Natick who died April 24, 1918, has been filed. The estate is valued at $9,650.39; $6,660.39 in personal property and $4,000 in real estate.

VISIT OF KING TO HARVARD AIDS DRIVE

Total of Boston Donations to College Endowment Fund Passes $1,000,000

The visit of King Albert to Cambridge added impetus to the Harvard Endowment Fund campaign, according to a statement issued today from fund headquarters, No. 95 Milk street.

In proof of this statement, the receipt of $34,000 in voluntary gifts to mail today was cited. In addition, depositaries of the fund reported $49,-274 as gifts cleared by teams on Saturday. This brings the total of Boston gifts to $1,088,276, leaving $3,911,724 necessary to bring Boston's share of the endowment fund up to the desired goal, of $5,000,000.

Thomas Nelson Perkins and Philip W. Spalding of the Greater Boston committee in a statement today said:

"No greater praise could have been given to any educational institution than that expressed by King Albert of Belgium at Cambridge yesterday, and no praise could have centred the attention of the world upon Harvard more directly than King Albert's commendation.

"In endeavoring to raise an endowment fund of $15,258,000 for Harvard University, its alumni have endeavored to bring before the country at large the important part taken by the university in the life of the country. To have such a universally-admired and beloved man as King Albert of Belgium praise the work of our alma mater as he did, enthuses us in our work.

"Harvard's sons in Boston and elsewhere know that as King Albert said that 'no university has rendered better service than Harvard.' It was with this knowledge and the strength of this knowledge that we began our endowment fund work.

"Harvard University was greatly honored by the visit of the King of Belgium, and those of us who are seeking gifts for the endowment fund feel it an honor to be aiding our alma mater in its time of need."

PASTOR OF OLD SOUTH COMMENDS GOV. COOLIDGE

"The State cannot be coerced or intimidated." No finer words were ever written than these by Governor Coolidge," declared the Rev. George A. Gordon, pastor of the Old South Church, in his sermon on "The Law of Liberty."

"Law without liberty is tyranny," he continued. "Liberty without law is anarchy. A civilized society is to endure it demands both law and liberty in combination."

WARNS PUBLIC AGAINST STOCK FRAUDS

Director of Savings Lewis Issues Caution on "Short Roads to Big Fortunes"

Washington, Oct. 6.—Safety deposit boxes through the United States are mausoleums of untold "paper" worth in dead securities.

The money wasted on worthless securities by credulous persons would, if totalled, exceed the immagination, says William M. Lewis, director of the savings division of the Treasury Department. He has sent this message to the public:

"Thousands of people in the United States are losing their hard-earned savings every day because they lack knowledge of financial details. If a man expects his financial tarrel to fill up, he must stop up the leaks in it.

"Untold numbers of fake scheme promoters and regiments of investment sharks because of this popular ignorance, are pointing out short roads to big fortunes to those whose Liberty Bonds and War Savings Stamps they hope to secure in exchange for beautifully embossed but absolutely worthless stock certificates.

"The fact that fraudulent brokers know the value of government securities and the worthlessness of their own "high grade, large investment return securities" is shown by their eagerness to "swap" the one for the other, Mr. Lewis added. He said their promises of luxurious ease from the proceeds of investment in their stocks are nothing but a snare and a delusion.

British Royal Pair Tempt Speed Law In Auto Trip

By Universal Service.

Special Cable Dispatch.

London, Oct. 6.—How King George and Queen Mary tempted the speed law to reach London was learned today when details became known of their remarkable journey from Balmoral to Buckingham Palace, ending Saturday night.

They motored 240 miles through the Scotch mountains region Friday, stopping that night at Lowther Castle as the guests of Lord Lonsdale.

Saturday they covered 201 miles in ten and a half hours, the law's limit being 30 miles an hour.

The royal couple would have had a special train, but the King insisted on a motor.

OIL PURCHASE PROBE MAY BE CALLED OFF

Talk of Compromise by Which the City Will Pay at Rate of 7 Cents a Gallon

Rumors were current at City Hall today to the effect that the Grand Jury investigation of the alleged illegal purchase of 35,000 gallons of road oil by certain city officials would never be held. This was the purchase which the Finance Commission declared cost the city $12,000.

A compromise is expected. Politicians understand that M. P. Scully, the contractor who sold the oil will accept seven cents a gallon, which the Finance Commission has termed a fair price in open market.

It had previously been reported that Scully would accept the seven-cent price on 250,000 gallons but would insist on 9.3 cents on the remainder.

If the city is not a loser, it is now believed that the Suffolk County Grand Jury will take no action. Any further steps would be on to Mayor Peters.

Mayor Peters is already in receipt of a suggestion from the Finance Commission that Superintendent Thomas W. Dawson of the Supply Department be disciplined for alleged violation of the city charter in making the purchase.

NORTH END ITALIANS BACK UP D'ANNUNZIO

At the first meeting of a series arranged for the purpose of raising funds for the relief of Italian soldiers in Fiume, more than 2,000 Italians, all of whom were residents of St. Johns Hall, North end, crowded the occupants of Fiume in D'Annunzio. Funds will be sent by local Italians to assist him in keeping control of the much disputed city.

Ex-Congressman Joseph A. Conry declared that Fiume belonged to the Italians because of racial and political reasons.

FOUR SHOTS FIRED AFTER FLEEING BOY

Excitement was furnished in the Curtis street section of East Boston when Supt. Hardiman Keene and members of the Orient Heights detachment fired three shots after a boy had ignored an order to stop.

The boy ran away.

She cried "Liar" when everyone else believed

James Kent, of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police, had confessed a murder. Everyone believed him implicitly. Can women succeed in business?

For centuries women have been considered useless where executive duties are concerned. But they are beginning to show the world its error. One woman, for instance, who had never done any work before, is today one of the highest salaried travelling women in the world. Another decided to go into advertising. She is so important today that even her name has been patented. How they did it is told in an inspiring article "On The Road". Another article in the same issue deals with the Federation of Professional and Business Women. Two hundred women met, stopped talking and listened for five hot days. They represent a voting body of several million women. This stimulating account tells what they have already accomplished and what they intend to do for you.

Could any girl be as innocent as Marigold?

When Alice Moran first saw her, Marigold was seated carelessly on the edge of a brook, her slender brown legs thrust into the tumbling cold water. Another time, when everybody was looking for her, Marigold was found on the roof—reading. Not even the tragedy, which seemed suddenly to enter her life, could undermine her attitude of innocence, of simplicity, of naivete. This extraordinary story "God's in His Heaven" by Kathleen Norris, appears complete in the October issue of Good Housekeeping.

Are second marriages happy?

Does a widow make a desirable wife? Does a man provide more plentifully for his second wife? Why is a man's temperament so different when it comes to a second spouse? Why does a woman, who treated her first husband to a continuous lecture, act so meekly to her second choice? These and many other questions are answered and discussed with a delightful undercurrent of humor by Dorothy Dix.

A dress that saves money

Fighting the high cost of living when it comes to women's clothing is like everything else. It's easy—when you know how. A complete article on the "Secrets of Remodeling Effectively and Economically," tells how to do it. It shows, among other things, a garment which, having one foundation, may be worn on different occasions with simple accessories. The other articles in this profusely illustrated department give the opinions of Worth, Paquin, Doeuillet, Georgette, Jenny, Doucet and others, on the winter silhouette, the pannier, evening wraps, millinery, the new designs in fabrics. Even the youngsters are not neglected. A detailed article on the economical wardrobe for children answers all the perplexing questions.

No parent DARE overlook this

The children of one family out of every four are suffering from malnutrition. Poverty has nothing to do with it. Your child may be among them; you may be contributing to one of the worst menaces facing this country. The causes are slight, the consequences almost beyond repair. You owe it to yourself, to your children, to your country, to read "Is Your Child Hungry?" by Louise Stevens Bryant. In this article, she explains the apparently trivial causes of underfeeding and the simple provisions by which it may by eliminated.

C. L. U. BARELY AVERTS TAKING STRIKE VOTE

Leaders of Police Union Nearly Stampede Meeting in Demanding a 'Showdown'

All the persuasiveness of the officers of the Boston Central Labor Union were required to avert a general strike vote on the police situation when two representatives of the striking policemen appeared before the delegates and demanded a "showdown" as to the support the parent body was to give the Police Union.

For a time it appeared that the meeting would be suspended into taking the vote, but this action was averted by speeches by Organiser Frank H. McCarthy, President M. J. O'Connell, Business Agent Jennings and Richard Mitchell of the Lithographers' Union. Their counsel prevailed and the striking policemen went away with the assurance that the "fight of the C. L. U. for the policemen is just beginning."

John Mahoney, formerly of the Joy street station, and Charles McGowan, formerly of the Back Bay station, made the demand for the "showdown." They assailed Governor Coolidge, Commissioner Curtis, the committee of thirty-four, and the newspapers, alleging that all these had taken a hand in the "crucifixion" of the strikers.

Mahoney and McGowan were sharply rebuked by Organizer McCarthy, who declared that they had no right to address the meeting.

"I am surprised at the action of these members of the Policemen's Union," he said, "who come here and attempt to sow discord in this meeting. They should not be allowed to speak, as they do not represent the sentiment of the union.

"While the policemen have the undivided support of organized labor, the manner in which it will be given will be determined by the committee in charge of this strike. If I were a policeman I would not lose any sleep worrying over the outcome of the strike, if present conditions continue."

Business Agent Jennings and President O'Donnell spoke in like tenor.

"The people who talk general strike are not, in my opinion, safe, sound, or sure," said Mr. Jennings. He advised the policemen to await developments and the strikers finally left the hall apparently satisfied by the assurances they had received.

PAYS $30 A WEEK TO GET TO HIS $9.30 JOB

Edward Becker, Private in C Company, State Guard, and president of a big auto agency, who does traffic duty in Causeway Street, and has his own chauffeur take him to and from his daily work

Selling automobiles five hours a day and directing traffic at Causeway and Canal streets two hours in the morning and again in the afternoon, keeps Edward Becker, a private in C Company, M. S. G., so busy that he has to ride to and from his duties in an auto.

But the point of the story about Private Becker is this, that he receives $1.55 a day for working as a traffic officer and that he pays a chauffeur $30 a week to drive him to his military duties.

"Well he might ride in a big car, with several of them at his disposal, if he so desired," say his fellow guardsmen. For Becker in private life is president of an automobile company.

Private Becker joined the State Guard two years ago and when the present emergency arose was one of the first to volunteer as a traffic officer. He was assigned to the traffic squad and put at one of Boston's busiest corners.

When seen at the crossing, Private Becker said, "Pretty busy right now and haven't time to talk. Yes, I admit that I ride to and from my duties in an automobile, and that I pay a chauffeur $30 a week to drive me around. But what of it. My business makes it necessary."

Asked if he enjoyed standing on the muddy crossing directing traffic, Private Becker replied: "I would rather be doing this than anything that I know of. I like it. Wish it was busy all the time."

NORTH ADAMS CITY EMPLOYES SEEK RAISE

Members of the police department seek the following increases: Chief, from $5.75 to $8 a day; captains, from $4.75 to $5.75 a day; patrolmen, from $4.25 to $5 a day.

City Treasurer S. H. Fairfield seeks an increase from $2,000 to $2,300 a year; City Almoner W. H. Ingraham and City Auditor John Sullivan, who now receive $1,200 a year each seek $1,500, and Sealer of Weights and Measures John Davis seeks $1,400 a year instead of the present $1,100.

The court, October 26, will hear protests against the Utilities Commission, which allowed the increase, without asking permission from the Superior Court.

CLAIM PRODUCTS FOR MARKET ARE HELD

Increase of Necessary Goods Cure for H. C. L., Asserts National Defence Council

Increased production of goods in proportion to the needs of the people and better co-operation and methods in the distribution and marketing of commodities are set forth as remedies of the high cost of living problem by the Council of National Defense in a statement issued by its director, Grosvenor B. Clarkson.

Causes of the present economic situation and the initial steps necessary to stamp out this evil are given in the belief that an intelligent understanding of the reasons for this condition will result in overcoming it. To vigorously enforce present laws and enact others to stop profiteering and hoarding is also held as a means to reduce the seriousness of the situation. The statement follows:

"The United States Council of National Defense, composed of the Secretaries of War, Navy, Interior, Agriculture, Commerce and Labor, has made a careful investigation of the high-cost-of-living problem, and finds:

FEW NECESSITIES PRODUCED.

"That the nation's productive powers have not been fully utilized since the armistice.

"That too few goods, notably the necessities of life, have been produced, and that even some of these goods have been withheld from the market, and therefore from the people.

"That the high cost of living is due in part to unavoidable war waste and increase of money and credit.

"That there has been and is considerable profiteering, intentional and unintentional.

"The council believes that the remedies for the situation are:

"To produce more goods and to produce them in proportion to the needs of the people.

"To stamp out profiteering and stop unnecessary hoarding.

"To enforce vigorously present laws and promptly to enact such further laws as are necessary to prevent and punish profiteering and needless hoarding.

"To bring about better co-operation and method in distribution and marketing goods.

"To keep both producer and consumer fully informed as to what goods are needed and as to what supplies are available, so that production may anticipate the country's demands.

TEAM WORK IMPERATIVE.

"Goods and not money are the means of life. Better standards of living are impossible without producing more goods. Man cannot consume what has not been produced.

"At the war's end our allies had desperate need of the essentials of life. We have had to share our resources with them, but this drain will gradually lessen. In so far as our shortage of goods is due to this cause we can well afford to be patient.

"It is just as essential that we have patience with the economic situation as at home. The process of production requires time. If production is greatly increased, vastly improved conditions will prevail in America when the results of present and future labor begin to appear.

"Team work is imperative. It is just as essential between retailer, wholesaler, and producer, as it is between employer and employe. Our people cannot long wait on one another group. The manufacturer, the farmer, the distributor must each immediately assume his part of the burden and enter upon his task. The nation cannot afford curtailment of goods vital to the people.

"On American business rests grave responsibility for efficient cooperation in bringing about full and proportionate production. On American labor rests an equally grave responsibility to attain maximum unit production and maintain uninterrupted distribution of goods if labor itself is not to suffer from further rises in the cost of living.

"WORK, SAVE, PRODUCE."

"The entire nation—producer, distributor and consumer alike—should return to the unity that won the war. Group interest and undue personal gain must give way to the good of the whole nation if the situation is to be squarely met.

"A common duty now fully as much as in the war, is to work and to save. In the words of the President in his address to the country on August 25, 1919, only by increased production and by rigid economy and saving on the part of the people can we hope for large decreases in the burdensome cost of living which now weighs us down."

"Work, save, co-operate, produce."

Woman Controller of Radium Supply Dead of Cancer

Baltimore, Oct. 6.—Mrs. Nart Kithill of Denver, Col., owner of the only source of radium in this country, is dead in a local sanitarium of cancer, the malady which the mineral she controlled was supposed to cure.

Mrs. Kithill came here last year for treatment by specialists. The treatment appeared to be successful at first, but the improvement was followed by a relapse. The remains will be cremated and the ashes sent to her former home in Morgantown, W. Va.

STATE GUARD TO DISCHARGE JUVENILES

300 Men Under 18 Must Be Dropped; New Rifles Now Being Issued

More than 300 members of the State Guard who are under eighteen will shortly be dropped from the service, newly-established rules requiring that all members be at least that age.

The task of weeding out the juveniles is a distasteful one for the officers of the guard, for these youths are almost without exception enthusiastic over their work and desirous of remaining in the State service. The authorities have decreed, however, that the responsibilities a guardsman must undertake are too heavy for boys' shoulders and the youthful element must go.

Arrangements will probably be made in the near future whereby older members of the guard, whose civic duties are urgently calling them, will be given indefinite leaves of absence and held "subject to call." No official decision governing such cases has been handed down as yet.

New rifles are now being given out to replace the somewhat antiquated ones now in the guardsmen have been forced to use.

NEWTON CONSTABULARY IS SEEKING RECRUITS

In various places in Harvard University today stations were opened for the purpose of enlisting Harvard students as members of the Newton Constabulary, a unit composed of business and professional men. The constabulary joined the State Guard recently. There are fifty vacancies, and it is hoped these will be filled by Harvard students, who will be expected to do police duty in Boston.

ENGLAND IN NEW WAR; WILL EXTERMINATE RATS

London, Oct. 6.—Amidst the upheaval of industrial unrest and the political agitations over peace problems the British government has found time to declare war on rats. The Board of Trade has designated October 20-27 as "National Rat Week," when the people are urged to exterminate the rodents.

GIRL UNJUSTLY CONVICTED, IS CHARGE

Meredith, N. H., Townspeople Ask Pardon for Hazel Marshall, "Stubborn Child"

Meredith, N. H., Oct. 6.—The name of practically every citizen of prominence in Meredith, including the members of the Board of Selectmen, will be signed to a petition for the pardon of Hazel Marshall, now confined in the State Reform School at Sudbury, which will be presented to the Governor's Council Wednesday.

The Marshall girl, now seventeen years old, was convicted on the sworn affidavits of representations made by Edwin Wright, general guardian of the Belknap County Child Welfare Association. Wright, who as superintendent of the Bellevue Home at Belmont, was the girl's guardian, testified at that time that she "had a tendency to be feebleminded" and a desire to visit her mother, who, he charged, was not a proper person to be in the vicinity of the girl.

Townspeople learned after the girl had been committed that last November, while in the employ of the Wilder of Meredith in nurse members of the family were taken ill with influenza, and that she had left the place after trouble with the family. The Wilder home was a boarding house of a sort called the Pine Fruit Preserving.

It was learned also that Wright had written the manager of a mill in which the girl's father was employed, asking that her mother be turned over to him. No specific reason having been made against the girl, prominent citizens became interested in the case. A petition that will present to the incoming Council Wednesday charges that the girl was "railroaded" to the reform school by Wright.

MORAN TOO CANNY FOR GLEASON

Fitchburg Pat Has Outguessed and Outgeneralled White Sox Leader All the Way

By NICK FLATLEY.

Chicago, Oct. 6—Somebody connected with the White Sox baseball club pulled a bone. It was a terrible error and no one yet has consented to take the blame. Just because the field was muddy and the rain was dropping all over the place, the fifth battle of the world's series was called off and everybody here is sore.

The Sox have played four games on fast, speedy diamonds and won all but three of them. They proved that they are not sure things on a dry track and the sure thing gents were ready to go down hook, line and sinker if they performed in the mud. However, the chance has gone flooie.

Regardless of the postponement, a double-header will be staged. This positive statement is made without fear or trembling, because those athletes find it difficult to linger nine innings before those $100,000 audiences. Anyway they are not performing for nothing these days. As soon as this day's battle is over they will grab the train they should have grabbed last night and spend two more days in Cincinnati. That's the only thing the athletes are spending on this trip.

SERIES ABOUT IN.

Deep, thick gloom is hanging over Chicago on the brink of the fifth round of the scheduled nine-round tilt. The Loyal Rooters, with visions of a long, hard Winter staring them in the face, have already given up all hope—and well they should. Moran's romping Reds have hung the high sign up on them, registered them at every turn and now are calmly awaiting an opening to deliver a knock-out wallop. That haymaker should land by next Wednesday night, provided moist weather does not intervene. However, adverse atmospheric conditions can only delay the final sock. The work is in—that's all there's to it—it's in.

The Reds are feeling mighty chesty today, and no one can blame them for that. They have defeated Gleason's two best hurlers—Cicotte and Williams—and are prepared to repeat. Pat Moran and his players were very nervous before the first game, but after the easy victory took on a new lease of life and proceeded to unravel "Lefty" Williams in the second. Kerr had them buffaloed in the third, but when Cicotte appeared for the second time they took advantage of a pair of foozles and copped.

REDS' GAMENESS FEATURES.

The outstanding feature of the series is the gameness shown by the National League champions. They are on their toes all of the time and playing their heads off, while the Sox are playing desultory baseball, acting as if their hearts were not in the game. They seem to be excited and running around in circles. They pull some sort of a bonehead every minute while the Reds are thinking every minute. The Chicagoans look like a beaten ball club, and only a miracle will save them.

Pat Moran has outguessed Gleason, Eddie Collins and the other members of the board of strategy. When any Red Leg gets on bases the infield does not know what to expect next. Once Jake Daubert, who was expected to bunt, soaked a three-bagger, and little things like that will disconcert any ball club. The Sox live up in the air and should break all existing altitude records before they come down.

REDS GAME BETTER.

But taking it all in all, Cincinnati has played better ball, showed more knowledge of the game and played everything safe. They have the goats of the Sox sluggers. They know how to pitch to them. Eddie Collins virtually has been helpless and he was expected to do big things with the stick. Because of being called upon to sacrifice constantly, Hap Felsch is losing his nerve and Gandil has failed in a pinch every time but one. Weaver also has fallen down in a pinch, and Joe Jackson's bat has been inserted when they did the least good. Joe has a safe wallop to his credit, but two were scratch two-baggers. The terrific clouting attacks of the White Sox have failed to materialize because of superior pitching of the Reds and Pat has used four different hurlers thus far and is likely to spring a new one today.

According to all the well-known experts Pat Moran will shoot Reuther back at the Sox today, but according to Jawn Evers, Hod Eller will do the chucking and we'll trail along with Jawn. The Trojan figures that if Eller can win the series is over anyhow, and even if he can't the Palmorites can step home and nominate themselves champions of the well-known universe. By working Reuther and Eller all of which sounds almost too common sense to be true in this clash, has crossed up everybody but the Cincinnati Reds.

HARD TO IMAGINE.

Evers claims that the White Sox resemble the famous Arab who folded up and beat it, and to the light of what has been hurled at them one can hardly wonder. Their stars have been ballyhooed by the precocious Reds. Can you imagine Jimmy Smith getting into an argument with the great Eddie Collins? You can't. It would be like some preliminary flyweight taking a sock at Jack Dempsey's horizontal forehead. But Jimmy did it just the same. You couldn't imagine very well that the Morans were going to put the Gleasons on the run, but they did.

Their best pitcher, their league's best twice has been bumped and their chances of copping have stretched to 16 to 5. Those Reds practically have been unbeatable in their own orchard, and after today's little meeting, the boys rattle back for another pair of pastimes.

PREDICTION SAFE ANYWAY.

In the light of past events, Gleason will just about be forced to come along once more with Williams, and the Reds look for a tough argument right there. They don't fear Kerr again, but they admit that left-handed Claude has plenty of stuff, and that's hard to hit in any league. The aforementioned Evers thinks along the same lines as we do in that little matter, which makes it virtually unanimous. As one of the misguided who thought the Sox couldn't lose, we with now to predict that it looks as if Moran had entirely too many pitchers and hitters and things like that. Making that prediction now may bring the original one to come to pass, wherefore we are perfectly covered up.

DUNCAN SCORING THE WINNING RUN

GLEASON READY FOR DESPERATE MEASURES

Confident White Sox Will Yet Take Measure of the Cincinnati Reds

By WILLIAM "KID" GLEASON, Manager of Chicago White Sox.

Chicago, Oct. 6—There was a lot of fans saying it was lucky for the White Sox that it rained and caused the fifth game of the series to be postponed a day. They said it would give us an extra day to recover from our defeats and give our pitchers a chance to rest up. We didn't need any time to recover. My pitchers didn't need an extra day of rest.

I had two or three of them ready and eager to get into the Sunday game. As a matter of fact, I was sorry it rained. I think the boys were in a mood to go out and give the Reds a good trimming. Now I must see that they keep in that mood for another day.

You know this series is not over by any means yet. They took three out of the first four. Suppose we should take three out of the next four. We have taken three out of four and four straight a lot of times and there is no reason why it couldn't be done against Cincinnati as well as against Cleveland or Detroit or New York in the American League race.

WHITE SOX OUT OF STRIDE.

If we take three of the next four and then have to play that ninth game to decide the big title I wonder what the odds will be then. My ball club hasn't struck its regular stride once since the series began but no one can tell me it will never strike its stride.

I know what those White Sox can do when they are going and all they have to do is to hit a couple of balls on the nose and they'll go. Eddie Collins hasn't showed any hitting yet, but he isn't going to go through a whole series and not hit. Joe Jackson hasn't hit 'em the way he can hit. Liebold has been hitting as bad luck but smashing the ball. Weaver has had the same bad luck. The only time we've looked like ourselves in offensive playing was the third game which we won.

IN FORM JUST ONCE.

There was just about two minutes during that game that the Sox were in their stride at the bat. Jackson and Gandil hit a couple of them on the nose and in no time we had two runs. There hasn't been another attack made by us that was worth shucks. But I know my gang can start an attack. I think they can put on one or two good ones. In every game from now on and that is all that will be necessary. Now I may have surprise to spring on the Reds in the games to come. I have a scheme of battle all mapped out. In fact, a couple of schemes and perhaps three may surprise somebody.

Something desperate has to be attempted, you know, when you're playing in hard luck and have won only one game out of four in a World's Series. The percentages are badly against us. We simply have to get out and play some desperate baseball. If I didn't know that I had a team capable of playing desperate baseball I would figure I didn't have much chance to win out now. But the gang of mine isn't licked. Three defeats out of four games hasn't taken the spirit out of one on the club. They are just as eager and confident now as at the start. They believe firmly they can win and there's the heart of a lion in every man.

JUST HAD TO SIT BACK.

So far the Reds haven't had to play any desperate baseball. All that was necessary was for them to accept the victories. They were behind in only that one game and they never even made one good attack that day. The fourth game was handed right to them on a platter.

MORAN EXPECTS REDS TO WIN QUICKLY

No Alibi Now as Williams Has Had Four Days' Rest, Says Cincinnati Leader

By PAT MORAN, Manager of the Cincinnati Reds.

Chicago, Oct. 6—I've got a suspicion that "Kid" Gleason conspires with the Chicago weather man to bring on rain Sunday and halt the World's Series program. For that day of rest appeals as a first-class "break" in favor of the White Sox.

Had we played Sunday the "Kid" probably would have used Claude Williams after only three days' layoff. And working a man every third day sometimes has an effect on his twirling wing. But the rain came on and now the left-hander gets four full days, which is rest enough for anybody. But the postponement Sunday means that when we beat Williams today the Sox won't have any chance to alibi it with the word "overworked."

We're going to beat the Sox in a hurry today. It's our aim to end this World's Series battle in the quickest possible time. The way to do it is to get the jump on the opposition in the early innings and then stop them every time they attempt to do any rallying.

It's our belief that we'll wind up the series in Cincinnati, sure, perhaps with the first game there on our return jaunt. For the boys, all through the series, have played almost admirable ball—and they aren't going to "crack," they're not that kind.

"Hod" Eller, our pitching selection for today, gives the Chicago folks a chance to look upon another truly great pitcher, a youngster who has everything—and a little something beyond.

W. K. VANDERBILT LEADS WINNERS ON FRENCH TURF

Paris, Oct. 6.—W. K. Vanderbilt, whose horse Tohad won the French Derby, leads the list of winning owners during the racing season in France. His horses won 412,000 francs during the season. The American jockey, Frank O'Neill, who has been riding in Europe for a number of years, is the leading rider.

CHICAGO HOTEL KEEPERS WIN ANYWAY

About 8,000,000 Who Picked the Reds Are Above Horizon Now With More Coming

By DAMON RUNYON.

Chicago, Oct. 6.—Luck broke against the proprietor of Cincinnati's Hotel Gibson, and the guy who runs the Blackstone - on - Boulevard won the first off day of the World's Series of 1919. It was about time some one in Chicago won something in this series.

Rain caused a postponement of the fifth game. Under the Marquis of Cincinnati rules, the White Sox and the Reds laid over here for the playoff. The old Mark himself, otherwise Garry Herrmann, gave out the news early on behalf of the national commission.

No one was very sorry. It gave some of the folks a chance to go to church and offered others an opportunity to locate another bottle.

There was no great amount of rainfall during the day, but there was a spill during the night, heavier than a Blackstone breakfast check. Comiskey Field was dressed in its pajamas right after the last game, but it seems the downpour was so profuse that it sweat right through the blankets.

MOVES TO REDLAND.

After today's game the series moves back to Cincinnati for another pair. Before the end of the month it may be decided to load what's left of the series on wagons and barnstorm the rural districts.

The Sox say they are still confident of winning out. But even a condemned guy generally tries to make the best of things. It's a dollar to a dime that every member of the local club has by this time figured out the amount of the loser's end to the fineness of a hair on a frog's back.

If the Sox win today and get as good as an even break in Cincy, the weary old series leads its aching bones back on the cars and returns to Chicago. The Reds can do a lot of people a great favor by stopping Reuther today and Reuther the next day.

It is considered illegal, as well as injudicious, to sell or lend a Chicago hotel or cafe keeper a rope, knife or six-shooter, as they sit contemplating what they would have done today to the loyal fans in the pre-2.75 per cent. era.

Gleason will probably start Claude Williams, the side-winder, today. But Moran may stick in Hod Eller, the shine-baller. Garry Herrmann can use the money.

NO SPEAKERS IN SERIES.

The glory that was the American League's seems to be drifting down the far horizon, but don't let anybody tell you that there are any second Tris Speakers playing the outfield in this series. Some of the outfield plays must have made Tris bust right out laughing.

George M. Cohan and his faithful confederate, Steve Reardon, are still pursuing the series, but you can buy Mr. Cohan's bets on the White Sox at a reduction right now.

Mr. T. Aloysius Dorgan, otherwise "Tad," the cartoonist, left the series very flat. "Tad" wanted to get back to New York the worst way, so he returned on the Michigan Central.

Cincinnati fans are still willing to bet even money on their ball club. After the Reds win five games it is believed the odds will go to 6 to 5 in their favor in Cincinnati.

Lots of guys who always thought the Reds would win the series are now coming up for air. There were about eight of them in the whole country before the series started. There are now about eight million.

AHEARN-WILSON BOUT OFF FOR TWO WEEKS

The bout between Jake (Young) Ahearn and Johnny Wilson is off as Ahearn was taken ill Saturday at his training quarters in Rhode Island. The bout has been postponed for two weeks. Word was received so late of Ahearn's illness that there was not time to arrange a substitute bout.

New Penn Boathouse

Philadelphia, Oct. 6.—A new $60,000 boathouse, located on the west bank of the Schuylkill river within a stone's throw of Franklin Field, will be ready for occupancy by the crews of the University of Pennsylvania next Spring.

Present Series Like That of 1903, But Also Different

Sixteen years ago, the Boston American champions lost three of the first four games they played with the Pittsburgh Pirates and then won four in a row. Many White Sox supporters are hoping that his will repeat itself.

But the difference between the past and the present is that the team in the ruck in 1903 had the better of the argument in pitchers while the reverse in the condition this season. Pittsburgh, though using "Schoolmaster" Leever, a fair hurler, in the box on alternate days had really only one first-class pitcher, "Deacon" Phillippe, while the Boston club had in Bill Dineen and Cy Young two of the greatest box artists in the history of the game.

WILHOIT BATTED .424 WHILE WITH WICHITA

Reuther Won Every Series' Opener This Year

"Dutch" Reuther ran true to form when he conquered the White Sox in the inaugural game of this year's classic, for his 1919 record shows him to have won previously every time Pat Moran selected him to start a series—and Pat did so on nine occasions.

TIGER TRACK TEAM LOOMING UP STRONGLY

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 6.—The squad of track men which reported to Captain Erdman at Palmer Stadium when the first call for fall candidates was sent out included every letter man from last year's team with the exception of Val Hammond, who was graduated in June. Many members of the 1919 freshman team, which won all its meets last year, now are eligible for the varsity, and indications point to one of the strongest teams in Old Nassau's history.

HARVARD STARS SUFFER MINOR INJURIES

Counting noses today, it was discovered that two of the twenty-two Harvard football men who took part in Saturday's game with Boston College were injured. Capt. Billie Murray, the varsity quarterback, has a charley horse, and from present indications will not be able to play against Colby, Saturday. Phil Philbin has a sore neck as a souvenir, but he will be back in harness by Wednesday.

Murray was in action three-fourths of the way Saturday, and left the game only when he was in distress. The little quarterback is a strong Harvard asset, and Coach Fisher is taking no chances of playing him again until he is in good shape.

EXPECT BRICKLEY.

They are looking for Charlie Brickley at Cambridge this week. Old Surefoot may be able to hand the ambitious drop kickers some of the recipes which brought him to the fore as a field goal kicker. Ralph Horween kicked in with a neat field goal against Boston College, but Babe Felton went to the mat when he was called to cross one over from the 35-yard line.

The coaches were somewhat disappointed at the poor interference offered their halfbacks on end runs Saturday. Eddie Casey had several good chances to break away for long runs spoiled because some venturesome Boston College tackler tore through the Crimson interference and dumped the Harvard star.

CLARK'S WORK EXCELLENT.

The playing of Tubby Clark was one of the brightest features in Harvard's all around game Saturday, and it commences to look as if the Milton husky is about right, and in no danger of re-injuring his back. Clark easily got one-half the tackles that were made in the rushline, and was a big factor in punching holes for his backs to plow through.

At center Phil Philbin likewise played a bang up game although opposed to a star like Heaphy of Boston College. Philbin more than held his own with his great rival and Harvard drove forty yards for a touchdown, Captain Murray directing the assault through the heart of the Boston line.

Murray's generalship was excellent Saturday, and not a little of the credit should go to the Harvard captain for the ten points his team made.

SPENCER BEATS KRAMER TWO HEATS IN THREE

Newark, N. J., Oct. 6.— Frank Kramer was defeated by Arthur Spencer in two out of three heats of a one-mile match race before 16,000 fans at the Velodrome. Kramer won the first heat by riding around Spencer and nipping him at the tape, just getting the decision by inches. In the next two heats, though Kramer again tried to ride from the rear and overtake Spencer, he failed.

Ray Eaton defeated Alfred Goullet in two out of three heats of a paced match.

GOLFING NOTES

If there is a shot in golf that causes the player any more abuse than the run-up approach it has never crossed the writer's path in his long experience with the link's game. The player of the run-up is apt to hear remarks of this kind, especially if he lays his ball dead to the pin, "Why don't you play golf" or "That's not playing the game" and "Cut out the croquet," but on the other hand if the player's shot is a bad one he will heag nothing, but is apt to see a broad grin on his opponent's face. Now the reason for this abuse that is heaped on the run-up approach shot is that the shot is in sort of competition with the game's most brilliant shot, the mashie pitch, and the pitch shot is considered better golf. Still in defending this sort, the run-up, you will have lined up some of the best players in the old country and most of its opponents agree that it is a most valuable shot to have in one's bag. The run-up shot is played almost universally in Scotland, and formerly was played with a club called the "Musselburgh iron," which was nothing more than a wooden putter in whose place the mashie now finds most favor.

This shot can be played very successfully on long-established courses where the harder turf lends itself to this type of stroke. In Scotland, where the game has been played so long, the courses are of this nature, and at St. Andrews there are but few holes where it cannot be played.

There are two different forms of the run-up, one shot being where the ball bugs the ground all the time, and on most courses in this country where the ground is still youthful this shot is dangerous. The other form of this shot that is worked to very good success here is the pitch-and-run, the plan being to pitch the ball low for half the distance with a run to the pin afterwards. This form of the run-up is bound to come in favor as the game gets older and the turf a little harder on all now youthful courses.

In a high wind this stroke is certainly worked to perfection by the masters of the shot. The player has not to take into account the arc which the ball will take in its flight; he has only to think of the distance and the power necessary to send it to the pin. In playing the run-up be sure you don't pass the blade of the club too much underneath the ball open stance employed. Play the ball off the left heel and in addressing keep the hands in advance of the club head, in order to reduce the loft of the club, that's if you use a mashie, meet the ball without any bending of the wrists, the stroke being a push with the wrists stiff.

Now, for sake of the game, if a player wants to run-up his approach, let him, and play your own game to suit yourself. If you want to show that your method of approach is best lay your ball inside his every time and may the best method win, run-up or pitch.

Al Scott became converted to the run-up when touring the old country, and after seeing men like Jim Braid and John L. Low run them up he decided to annex it and now carries it in his bag. It's a money-getter with the old wind blowing—Eh! Capt.?

O'LEARY PLANS WALKING TRIP OVER UNITED STATES

Columbus, O., Oct. 6.—Dan O'Leary, the veteran six-day walker, says he will start on the greatest effort of his life on October 15, when he leaves the State capitol at Columbus, Ohio, to walk to every one of the 48 State capitals in the United States.

He calculates that the trip will be completed in three years. At the expiration of three years O'Leary's age will be eighty-one.

SCHOOL ELEVENS HAVE ACTIVE WEEK AHEAD

This week will mark the opening of the Suburban League and the Boston City League. Somerville and Cambridge Latin will play for the premiere game for the Suburban League, while the game between Dorchester High and English at Fenway Park, Friday will be the first settg in the City League.

The holiday, next Monday, will have the best program so far this season, with three Suburban League games and several City League games on the card.

Wednesday, the best game will be between Boston Latin and Hyde Park High at the Brook Reforsation, Hyde Park. The other games on the program will be played out of town.

Boston College High will travel to Southboro to play against the St. Mark's team. Brighton will play at Swampscott, Lawrence at Wakefield and the Lynn Classical team will go to Deering, Me., to meet the Deering High School.

COMMERCE IS RATTLE.

The High School of Commerce will meet the Framingham High team at Fenway Park Thursday. Skip Sherlock has his team going in great shape and it looks as if the Fenway School might repeat their performance of last season when they won the championship of the city. Boston Latin and English High look to have the next best aggregations in the City League, with Dorchester not so far behind. The race in both the Suburban and the City League this season is bound to be a tight one, with the game at the end of the season between the champs of either league furnishing a bang-up finish to what appears to be a perfect season.

The game between Dorchester and English High at Fenway Park Friday afternoon will go a long ways in deciding the outcome of the season. English has a strong team, as was shown by their game at Groton where they played to a 7 to 7 tie. Dorchester was beaten by Cambridge Latin last week, but will give the Montgomery street school some battle when they meet.

Somerville and Cambridge Latin will be the only Suburban League teams to play in a league game this week. Cambridge Latin will have the advantage over their opponents inasmuch as it will be their third game, while the Blue and Red will be playing their first game.

In Medeiros, Lee McDonald has a drop-kicker worthy of notice, as proved by his performance in the Dorchester game, where he dropped two over. Somerville will have the advantage of weight, having one of the heaviest teams in the city.

MAY BE OUT FOR SEASON.

The loss of George Dowd to Somerville, who was one of their best backs, will also be a drawback to the Somerville eleven. Dowd was injured in practice, but was not thought to be badly hurt. It is now doubtful if he will be back in the lineup for the rest of the season.

Brookline High, which has played its last two games to a tie, will battle at Groton Saturday. The Groton School has been hot on by the Boston Latin School and tied by English, but the team from the wealthy town will have to play better than before if it is to come back with a win.

There will be a good chance to get a line on the North Shore League team as they are all in action this week. Peabody will play at Manchester, Lynn Classical at Haverhill, Gloucester at Lynn English, Revere at Saugus and Swampscott will meet the Woburn team.

HILL TO BOX ADAIR IN ARMORY A. A. BOUT

Jimmy Hill, Australian lightweight, will be in our midst tomorrow night. He is booked to clash with Barney Adair of New York in a twelve-round bout at the Grand Opera House under the direction of the Armory A. A.

Hill is a 126-pounder and is so good that he has been passed up by Benny Leonard, Lew Tendler and Johnny Dundee. The Australian did not hesitate in agreeing to meet Adair even though the latter will outweigh him by ten pounds.

Adair is eager to win as he is booked to meet Eddie Moy of Philadelphia in Marlboro Friday night.

ALECKS AND EAGAN TO BOX AT FRAMINGHAM

Johnny Alecks, hard hitting Philadelphia middleweight, and Joe Eagan of Dorchester will exchange blows in the feature bout of twelve rounds at the Framingham A. C. of Framingham tonight. Alecks showed well in his tussles at Marlboro defeating Joe Demaris, but losing to Pal Reid, Eagan, however, believes his speed and skill will enable him to finish in front.

YALE'S SHOWING SATISFACTORY TO COACHES

New Haven, Oct. 6.—Yale's football coaches do not feel depressed at the weak showing of the eleven against Springfield College Saturday. They pointed out today that the team played without Captain Tim Callahan the most aggressive member of the rush line, and that any eleven without its natural leader is handicapped. The absence of Joe Neville, the best scoring back, and Kirkpatrick, the former Exeter star and Yale's varsity shifting tackle of three seasons ago also weakened the Eli attack.

Another factor that kept down Yale's score was the heavy playing surface in the bowl, which was suffering from the effects of three days of rain.

The coaches took more seriously however, the fumbling which in the occasions checked the Eli advance. Continuance in this fault will be fatal to any candidate's chances of selection for the final games of the season.

In the rush line Carter Gail, guard, and "Babe" Allen, end made the most satisfactory showing. Gail's defensive play, and the down the field running and tackling of Allen were conspicuously valuable. The punting of Paul Crane settled fears regarding a backfield player who can perform this specialty effectively. Wells made good as a line breaker of the lighter type while the veteran Jim Braden not only smashed the Springfield line regularly, but lifted a field goal from the forty-yard line at a difficult angle.

Actually Yale's drop-kickers do not display such finished form until mid-season, sometimes not till the final game. Braden's and Thorne Murphy's goals attest to the painstaking character of the coaching in every department of football which Dr. Sharpe, the new athletic director, has installed in his reorganization of Yale sport.

ART SMITH ISSUES CALL FOR HILL AND DALE MEN

Track Coach Art Smith of Tufts has issued a call for cross-country candidates.

There is plenty of good material available and Smith believes a Tufts will be up with the best of them this Fall. All things point to a very successful season of track, although a few of last year's headliners are among the missing. Simone Pinto, who has entered Harvard, is the biggest loss, as the former Huntington School star was counted on to do the honors for the Brown and Blue this year. However, there is a rumor that "Niger" Curtin, all-around athlete at Boston College, is to enter Tufts Dental School. Curtin would help matters out considerably.

Bobby Black, holder of the inter-scholastic record for the 440-yard run, will lead the Brown and Blue cohorts. Black, who came to Tufts from Colby Academy, is among the headliners in college circles over the quarter-mile course and looks better than ever this Fall.

Roush Drove in Most Deciding Runs for the Reds

Eddie Roush drove in more winning runs with bats for the Cincinnati Reds than any other member of the National League champions during the season. Silent" Eddie sent the deciding tally home in fourteen games, several of the safeties being for extra bases.

Ranking second to the outfielder was Heinie Groh, who had sixteen games to his credit, and closely following came Jake Daubert with ten. Kopf with nine and Rariden eight.

Football Games Wanted

The Merrill A. C. football team of Cambridge is anxious to arrange games with any 115-120-pound team in the State. Those anxious to secure dates should address A. O'Brien No. 20 Antrim street, Cambridge or telephone Cambridge 511 between 6 and 7 p. m.

Le Gendre has competed in New England only once before, and that time he was unheard of. However, now that he has become famous as the winner of the interallied pentathlon, the committee cast about for suitable competitors in all-round competition for the Maine man, and have secured Johnny Bariels of University of Pennsylvania, another all-round athlete of repute.

Le Gendre and Bariels will compete in the 100-yard dash, both hurdle events, the 100 and 220-yard hurdles, the high, step and jump, pole vault, discus and javelin throws.

Billy Hayes of Springfield A. A. U. 16-pound champion, another Georgetown man, will compete in the sprints, and Earl Thomson of Dartmouth will go after the hurdle honors.

George Bronder, national champion javelin thrower will appear in his specialty, while the three-mile championship will have each individual stars as Mike Devaney, the titleholder; Charles Borah, the national five-mile champion; Fred Faller of the Dorchester, A. A., who finished second to Borah in the ten-mile run; Jimmy Henigan, former New England distance champion; Harold Weeks, another distance star, and teams from Harvard, M. I. T., New Hampshire State College and other colleges.

STAR ATHLETES FOR LEGION SPORT MEET

The three-day athletic carnival to be held in connection with the American Legion military extravaganza at Braves Field next Thursday, Friday and Saturday afternoons, promises to be the biggest event of its kind staged in New England this season.

One of the athletes who will attract unusual attention will be Bob Geordie of Lewiston, Me., and Georgetown University, who won the pentathalon at the interallied games at Pershing Stadium.

This Day in Our History—October 6, 1919

THIS is the anniversary of the day in 1862 when General McClellan, in command of the Union forces, was ordered to cross the Potomac. McClellan's failure to secure any decisive victory against Lee resulted in his removal, and ultimately it remained for Grant, Sherman and Sheridan to crush the Confederate armies.

The Risks of Lightning

IT is not generally known that lightning has a varying affinity for different trees. M. Camille Flammarion, the famous French scientist, showed that the lime is the safest and the oak the most dangerous tree under which to stand in a thunderstorm.

THE GRAY HAIR

A MYSTERY STORY OF NEW YORK LIFE

"Society for the Redistribution of Superfluous Wealth" Terrorizes Millionaires

By Arthur Somers Roche

(Whose novels have placed him in the front rank as a writer of detective stories)

The Action So Far

John Hastings, multi-millionaire and captain of industry, has employed Robert Allaire, a young lawyer, to do some work for him. A criminal impersonates Allaire and reveals himself as a member of "The Society for the Redistribution of Superfluous Wealth." He threatens Hastings, who attempts to summon aid. The visitor shoots him dead and escapes. Arrested later, Allaire proves a perfect alibi. Police Commissioner Blake is puzzled. Meanwhile, three other millionaires are slain. Allaire receives a note from the society and asks over his arrest and the letter with Allison Courtney, his fiancee. Blake is replaced by Heenan, a famous detective. Millionaire Tobey is kidnaped by the dread society. Heenan finds the package of supposed protection money to contain only waste paper. The master criminal had bound and gagged Wilkins' chauffeur and armed with the real cash. Allaire and Blake recognizes Courtney driving a suspected taxi. Blake picks a gray hair from Allison's coat. He finds the costumer who sold the wig from which it came. Blake is knocked unconscious as he enters Allaire's apartments.

"UNCLE," she said, "aren't you going to see a doctor? Have you been well since I left?"

"I'm better," he said shortly. To her relief he did not ask her again why he had been that Allaire had thought he recognized under the disguise of the chauffeur's uniform. "Nevertheless, I'll see the doctor—perhaps."

"I wish you would," she said, "or leave town at once. That would be better, uncle. For your illness is brought on by this dreadful society, and if you were, where they couldn't get you—" A thought came to her. "Uncle, is there any one that you know that could possibly be the murderer? Bob tells me that Mr. Heenan was certain that it was Tobey, but that now he's equally certain it isn't."

"But uncle, I know it's someone you know. It must be. It's also someone who knows Bob. Think who knows you both and could possibly be the murderer. Uncle, is there anyone you know well who's been with you in the last forty-eight hours that has gray hair?"

"Why?" he asked.

Mr. Blake found a gray hair on my coat collar. He wanted to know what man had been near enough to me to leave a hair there. It was funny; I told him that you were the only one, and, that man who looked like you wasn't close to me at all, naturally. I laughed at the moment, remembering that my tailor has gray hair and might have left one of the few he possesses on my coat.

A Brusque Command

"But it just occurs to me now that I looked very carefully under the lapel of that coat when it came back from the tailor's. For, in hanging it up, the lapel had been torn, and I wanted to see how well it had been repaired. And if that hair had been there, I'd have noticed it. So, if you've been near any gray-haired man, and you remember him—you see, the hair might have dropped on you and then been transferred to me, and—"

"Nonsense!" Courtney snapped. "How could I remember how many gray-haired men have sat next to me in cars or brushed against me on the streets? You'd better see the doctor yourself, Allison. This thing has become an obsession with you—and with everyone else, I guess. I suppose," he added sarcastically, "that Blake took the hair to a chemist's and that he'll have an analysis made of it, eh?"

But she did not respond to his jeer for a moment. She was thinking.

"Why, I believe he did take it away with him! I seem to remember that he held it in his hands, and——"

"Stop thinking about it!" her uncle commanded harshly. "He probably dropped the nasty thing in the nearest waste-paper basket, Allison, you've upset me with your talk."

He passed his hand across his forehead, and she saw that it shook.

"Won't you see the doctor?" she begged.

He shook his head impatiently.

"Doctors can do me no good. I want quiet—and rest."

"Then lie down in your room," she said quickly.

"And then I'll miss you—I'll want something and you'll be out——"

"I'll stay right in the house the rest of the day," she promised.

"Or else you'll be worried about me and coming up to see if I'm well," he said with an effort at a smile. "Anyway I have some business to attend to downtown. I have some bonds I wish to sell, and——"

"Couldn't I do it for you," she asked quickly, "if it must be done today?"

A Promise Asked

"I'm thinking of going away, as you suggest," he answered, to her surprise. "But this bond business ought to be attended to. Wilkins' office will handle the sale, probably give me a check for them at once. But I have them here——"

"Will you stay right in the house, not go anywhere, if I take them downtown for you?"

"If you promise that the servants won't disturb me—on any account?"

"I'll see to that," she smiled.

He looked doubtfully at her, and her heart went out to him, nervous, worn out, and haggard as he was. Then he picked up the telephone and got Wilkins' office. The broker was angered at Courtney because of the latter's failure to subscribe to the blackmail fund, but business was always business with Wilkins. When he found that Courtney was willing to take a point less than the close of the market for twenty gilt edged industrial bonds, provided he got cash or check today, the broker pounced upon the bargain. Then he asked:

"Going away, Courtney?"

"Never mind," said Courtney.

"But, look here," said Wilkins: "You know where Deswald was going? Well, we're all going there the first thing in the morning."

Wilkins' nerves were also upset, and he dared not be more explicit lest information of the plan leak out. But Wilkins, at heart, wasn't a bad sort. This sale of bonds by Courtney made him believe that Courtney had had a hand. Furthermore, Courtney had been losing, not heavily, but steadily, in the stock market for some time. Perhaps poverty and unwillingness to borrow what he might not be able to repay had been behind Courtney's refusal to contribute, and not sheer bravado.

"Join us," said Wilkins, impulsively.

"That's good of you, Wilkins," said Courtney. "Maybe. Meantime—if my niece comes down with the bonds, can she have your check?"

"She can," said Wilkins. "And I'll give her directions."

Courtney hung up the receiver.

"Wilkins will give you a check for nineteen thousand and some hundred dollars," he said to Allison. He looked at his watch. It was a lucky chance that Wilkins was in his office at this hour. Only the fact that he felt rather secure in his office, among his trusted employes, all of whom had instructions to admit no strangers to their employer's presence, indeed to admit no one at all unless an employe entered with each visitor, had kept Wilkins downtown until after office-hour.

But he did not now a quarter to 5.

Take Time

"It may take you a little time, Allison," said Courtney. "Half an hour to get down town, fifteen minutes to transact the business, and half an hour to get back. That would make it six o'clock. But we don't dine until seven. Let me rest until ten minutes to seven, will you? Promise that you won't disturb me until then. You promise?"

Lost—A Husband. Any One of a MILLION or So Wives Can Identify Him by This Description

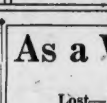
Copyright, 1919, by The Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.

I have LOST him——

My Perfectly Good Husband!,

It is not as though he had "passed on" to a Better World.

For then there would be Memory—and the hope of meeting him in Heaven, and the insurance—and all that!



To say nothing of the consoling knowledge that I look "interesting" in black.

It isn't even as though I had divorced him.

For then there would be the alimony.

And all the excitement and suspense—and the simply WONDERFUL Nevada climate!

It isn't even as though another woman had "lured" him from me.

Because a husband that can be "lured away" isn't worth the rope with which he has to be tied.

And the woman who "lures" him is sometimes a delivering angel in disguise.

But this—THIS is different!

And I miss him SO!

I miss the long, quiet, inspiring evenings, when he used to read to me from Bernard Shaw or Walt Whitman,

(Or the Sporting Page, or "The Crazy Kids," or the stock quotations.)

And the hustle and bustle of getting him off to the office mornings.

And the wild excitement of hunting for his shoes—and his hat and his pepsin tablets, and his safety razor blades, and the court-plaster, and his gloves, and his newspaper.

And the cozy, little heart-to-heart before breakfast scraps.

And the eleven o'clock telephone calls, and the making-up, and the candy and flowers, and all that!

The house is as quiet as the dead!

But there are no flowers—and the music is lacking.

It is like living with a ghost.

Sometimes I catch a fleeting glimpse of him, as he slips in after dusk with just enough strength to plunge wearily into bed.

Or again, when he wakes up at the last moment in the morning with barely time to drop into his clothes, gulp down a cup of coffee, and rush past me with a peck on the cheek and a muttered "G'bye."

Sometimes, on rainy days, I hear him moving restlessly about in his room—and swearing softly.

But it is like living with a disembodied spirit!

Ah, me! If he had only gone to France, or Russia, or the Klondike—or even Paradise—I might have hoped, some day to have him back again.

But WHAT hope is there for a wife like me?

Don't try to console me by telling me

That it is almost Winter and the wind and the snow and the frost will soon drive him back to his fireside again!

What joy is there in having a husband's material body around the house,

When his spiritual self is roaming the fields in the wake of a silly, little, white bail—

Twenty miles away!

What hope is there for ME?

My Husband—HAS JOINED A GOLF CLUB.

CHAPTER LXIII.

Copyright, 1919, Star Company.

SAMUEL LEIGHTON was seated in his private office that morning when his daughter entered. He raised his eyebrows questioningly as she followed the clerk who announced her.

"I understood you were alone, Dad," she began as soon as the door had closed behind her.

"I hoped you were resting, my dear," her parent said, kissing her. "I hardly expected a call from you down here. How did you come?"

"In the subway."

"It must have been something important to make you come in that way," he teased. "Do you want some money?"

She shook her head smilingly. "No, sir. I came to tell you I have followed your instructions and have questioned Annie about Norah—and Smith."

"Yes? But you could have told me that tonight."

"Perhaps so," the girl hurried on, "but Annie proved so plainly that Smith was innocent that I thought you should know about it. This is what she told me."

"Well," he said, when she had finished, "as the girl had no object in exaggerating, we must believe her. It is plain that Norah had a grudge against Smith."

"Because he was not the kind she thought he was, Dad." Desiree insisted. "I know this because I saw that letter she wrote him—as you may remember."

Then, although her breath came fast, she explained how she had read the paper which she thought at first her father had dropped.

Desiree Is Confused

Samuel Leighton shrugged his shoulders. "It is evident that the fellow's good looks caused Norah to make a fool of herself, that's all. My respect for Smith increases when I find that he did not encourage her. Still, that is no concern of ours. All we care to learn is that the pendant is safe and that it was not stolen. Do you suppose Smith guesses that we suspected him?"

"Why, yes, sir—of course he knew it from my surprise when I found my property last night," she asserted illogically.

"What did he say?"

Cuticura Soap IS IDEAL For the Hands

"I—I—don't just remember—only that it was all right or something of that sort when I told him that—when I tried to explain to him——"

She stopped, confused, when she remembered how much moved she had been.

"I am afraid," she added lamely, "that I was so excited that I said something foolish — perhaps — I mean I did not explain——"

"Of course you did not," her father interposed kindly. "Nor was it your place to do so. I will send for Smith and make it right with him."

Desiree started uptown in a perturbed state of mind. She was so agitated by what had occurred that she wished there was some further action that she could take. Her trip to her father's office had been made because she could not rest until she had heard his assertion that he believed in Smith's innocence. Now she longed to tell the chauffeur right in the eyes of all concerned.

Suddenly she remembered Mr. Perry, the jeweler. In her oversensitive state she felt she must inform him that the missing property was safe, thus further exonerating Smith. Stopping at the Fifth avenue shop, she went into the rear of the store where Mr. Perry's office was.

He rose at sight of her and came forward. She greeted him eagerly.

"Good morning, Mr. Perry. I just stopped in to tell you that my pendant has been found and I will bring or send it and the chain down tomorrow to make sure the stones and catch are secure."

An Intimated Rebuke

The man looked surprised. "It has been found, has it, Miss Leighton? I congratulate you How did you happen to locate it?"

"It had been misplaced by my maid," Desiree replied. "So, you see, I was quite right in insisting that it had not been stolen."

"Ah, yes—I see. But how did the box happen to be all tied up, yet empty?"

"Oh, it was a foolish mistake," the owner of the pendant evaded. "And, by the way, I think it might serve as a lesson to some of us not to be too ready to suspect others of dishonesty, of which they are quite incapable."

Mr. Perry flushed, but tried to laugh.

"I just happened to be passing, so stopped in to tell you about the matter," she said lightly. "You were very kind to take so much interest in my property."

"Not at all," the man demurred. "The pennant is very valuable—a wonderfully beautiful article. Your father showed it to me just after it came into your possession. It was an heirloom, if I am not mistaken?"

"It was left me by a friend," she said briefly. "Good morning."

She had done all she could to clear Smith's name of suspicion. She had hoped that after doing this she would feel at peace.

Yet now, as she went uptown, she was wishing that she could do something more for him. She had not sent for the car this morning, as she felt bashful at meeting him after what had happened last night.

To Renew Complexion Without Cosmetics

If the excessive user of cosmetics only knew the sensation her artificiality really makes upon others, she would quickly seek means of gaining a natural complexion. Let her acquire the healthful habit of discarding make-ups entirely, and she will soon have the best complexion that women envy and men admire. It is easy to get an ounce of mercolized wax at any drug store, use nightly like cold cream and wash off mornings. And the results are so remarkable. Gradually the lifeless cuticle peels off, in almost invisible flaky particles. In a week or so there's a brand-new complexion, clear, velvety, soft, of girlish color and texture.

The treatment is so simple, harmless and so marvelously effective, the wonder is that every woman whose skin is withered, discolored rough, freckled or pimpled, has not already adopted it.—Advertisement.

OF ALL the tonics guaranteed to make one frisk about, of all the foods the sick must feed upon are they grow stout, of all the compounded weird and odd of herbs and weeds and grass, of toadstools and of goldenrod, catnip and sassafras, I will not say a single word to make the doctors quail. The medico's a friendly bird and he must earn some kale. There are some guys who like pink pills, that think they cure all earthly ills and drive all care away. To such folks I do not begrudge the pleasure they derive; I have no with to harshly judge it on these things may thrive. But I would choose a different fare in seeking pain's redress, I find there's naught else can compare with draughts of real success. It must be just my head's at fault when I am in distress, for skyward will my spirits vault if I can nab success. No matter where I lackrepose, in back or legs or arms, in lungs or liver or in toes, this tonic always charms. I may be feeling death is nigh, I've got it in the neck, but watch and see my pains all fly if I receive a check! Perchance some distant goal I make which long I've strived to win; no longer does my headache ache, my backbone feel like sin. Electric batteries have naught upon my medicine cure, with mighty magic is it fraught, it's always safe and sure. So to all dubs who wail and sigh for health and happiness, I'd say: "Get up and have a try to some way taste success!"

Mayer's Remedy (NR Tablets) Are Helping Thousands Who Tried Expensive Things Without Results. 25c Guaranteed.

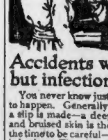
There are three vital processes of human existence—the digestion of food, the extraction of nourishment from it and the elimination of waste.

Poor digestion and assimilation means failure to derive full nourishment from food, and that in turn often means impoverished blood, weakness, anemia, etc. Poor elimination means an accumulation of waste matter which poisons the body, lowers vitality, decreases the power of resistance to disease and leads to the development of many serious ills.

Rheumatism—due to some interference with the process of digestion, failure to get rid of certain body poisons—cannot be overcome by any treatment that fails to correct the condition responsible for it. Could any reasonable person expect to rid himself of rheumatism as long as rheumatic poison is allowed to remain in the body?

Think of this. It explains the success of Mayer's Remedy (NR Tablets) is so many cases where other medicines have failed. Thousands are using NR Tablets every day and getting relief. Why not give one or two times as much for uncertain things? A 25c box of Mayer's Remedy (NR Tablets), containing enough to last two weeks, will help you, must give you prompt relief or the satisfactory benefit or cost you nothing.

Mayer's Remedy is not only for the relief of rheumatism. It improves digestion, tones the liver, regulates kidney and bowel action, improves the blood and cleanses the system. You've tried the expensive medicines and doctors, now make the real test. You'll get results this time. Just try it. Mayer's Remedy (NR Tablets) is sold, guaranteed and recommended by your druggist.



Accidents will occur, but infection need not

You never know just when it is going to happen. Generally without warning a slip is made—a deep cut—a broken and bruised skin is the result. That's the time to be careful—to guard against infection. There's safety and security in a jar of Resinol Ointment.

Another thing—Resinol and bandages—it heals twice as fast this way. Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment used jointly are excellent for the treatment of all skin disorders on limbs, body and face. They work quickly and well.

STEWART IS A LEADER IN BOSTON

Prices Advance at the Opening and Market Continues Strong

The Boston market was firm at the opening with Stewart the feature of early trading. It was active as well as strong. Within a few minutes several thousand shares changed hands, and it had advanced from 84¾ to the highest record of 86¾. Ventura was another conspicuous issue as regards activity. It also sold at its record highest.

Among other strong stocks during the morning were Fairbanks, Punta Alegre, Warren Brothers, Gray & Davis, Swift & Co., New Haven and International Products. They all advanced a point or more. Fractional gains were made by Swift International, Root and Van Dervoort, North Butte, New Cornelia, Pond Creek, Island Creek, Parish and Bingham and Helvetia.

Among issues to decline were Libby, Bigheart, Carson Hill, American Telephone, Massachusetts Gas and Osceola. Declines ruled small. Amoskeag was off a point. The local market remained strong all the morning. Stewart and Fairbanks were among the most active issues.

Russia's Depleted Herds

Germany used to obtain most of the leather it imported from Russia, and it is a grave question with shoe and other manufacturers in the former country where an adequate supply can be obtained in the future. It is estimated that cattle herds in Russia have decreased more than 50 per cent. in five years.

Oil Exports Increase

During the last twelve years the mineral oil exports of this country have increased 133 per cent., and they are about 20 per cent. larger now than they were just prior to the beginning of the war.

STEELS STRONG IN ACTIVE TRADING

General Motors Sells at Its Highest Record Figure

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were strong in New York at noon, but were not at the highest price level of the morning. The market was very active from the beginning, first hour transactions exceeding 400,000 shares. Steels were strong all the forenoon. Among issues to sell at record high prices were Mexican Petroleum and Kelly Springfield. Cuba Cane sold at its 1919 highest. Foreign exchange rates ruled higher at the opening. Call money was firm quoted at 7 per cent. On the Cotton Exchange prices were much higher.

Among issues to advance the most during the morning were Chandler, American Locomotive, Baldwin, Studebaker, American Tobacco, Atlantic Gulf, Cuba Cane, Lorillard, Marine preferred, Kelly Springfield, Pan-American, Royal Dutch, Pressed Steel Car, Republic Steel, Texas Co., Studebaker, Industrial Alcohol, U. S. Rubber and Worthington Pump. They had gained from two to more than nine points. At its highest General Motors was up sixteen points.

U. S. Steel at its highest was up 2¾ at 108, and Crucible, 13 at 248.

GAINS GENERAL AT OPENING.

Gains were general and many substantial when the market began, stocks advancing from fractions to seven points immediately and with Crucible to the fore. On its first sale U. S. Steel began with a point gain. The termination of the British railway strike and belief that the railway strike in this country is waning were bull factors which caused a greatly enlarged demand for stocks, buying orders from the outside were many, and when trading started prices climbed at once. General Motors led the list in opening gains, soaring almost twelve points to a highest record price at the opening. Oils, equipments, motors and all other kinds of stocks had a part in the upward trend. Sales ran large and were more in evidence than usual.

WHITE HOUSE REPORTS HELPED.

The upward movement was helped along by reports from the White House that President Wilson's condition is more encouraging. Covering of shorts continued this morning. The bank statement was better than had been expected, and it is hoped that money rates will relax before long. The week began with the advantage resting with the bulls. This was reflected by rails. Hope is still strong that the Congress will act favorably toward carriers. On his return from Washington, N. L. Amster said: "The way things are shaping up it seems certain that Congress will take hold of railroad legislation in good earnest in the next two weeks or so and that a definite program will be put through before the end of the year."

CALL RATE ADVANCE FEATURES MONEY MART

The advance in the rate for call loans was the feature of the money market last week. Four times during that period it rose to 12 per cent. after opening at 8 per cent. The lower figure was quoted at the week end. The advance in the rate did not, it is stated, draw any money from the interior to New York.

The rise is explained by some as resulting from such money withdrawn by the government that banks feel justified in calling loans. It is stated also that money is being affected by the Federal Reserve Bank rule that member banks must report only their reserve position weekly instead of monthly. Bankers appear to see nothing in the present situation to indicate a speedy relaxation of rates.

U. S. Steel Expansion

It is understood that the United States Steel Corporation has a construction program which will call for the expenditure of from $75,000,000 to $100,000,000 within a year. It is believed that plant expansion will be chiefly in districts where workmen have showed the least disposition to strike.

Cotton Market Opening

New York, Oct. 6.—The sudden ending of the British railway strike and a consequent bullish turn here gave rise to a strong and active opening in the cotton market. First prices jumped 81 to 100 points, followed by further upturns. Offerings were light and unrestricted. Opening prices were: October, 31.46, up 85; December, 31.85, to 31.90, up 103 to 105; January, 31.35 to 31.55, up 81 to 91; March, 31.00, up 90; May, 31.05, up 73.

Chicago Grain Market

Chicago, Oct. 6.—Corn opened 1¼c to 2½c higher on Oats keys, ranged 1¼c to 2c higher, closing strong. Opening prices were: December, 1.44; December, 1.25¾ to 1.26; May, 1.23¾ to 1.24. Oats—December, 71¾; May, 73¾ to 73¾. Lard—January, 23.80.

MEN find they can smoke Fatimas freely without that "too much" feeling.

That's because Fatimas, unlike straight Turkish cigarettes, are not over-rich. They contain more Turkish than any other Turkish blend cigarette — but not too much. "Just enough Turkish."

ADULT GUIDES NEEDED BY SCOUTS

Executive Appeals for Men to Volunteer as Leaders in Boys' Movement

In an appeal for scout masters in the Boy Scout movement, Edward S. Roche, scout executive for the First Boston District, has addressed the following letter to the editor of the American:

"Editor Boston American:

"Had the Boy Scout movement entered into the lives of the rowdies who ran wild in Boston recently, it would have so surely developed manliness and character in them as to make participation in such acts unthinkable. This surely would have been a boon to additional scout masters. Is not such a cause worthy of your assistance?

"What is the trouble today? Why have we riots, disorders and rowdyisms? Certainly most people are good at heart. No doubt we can find by thorough investigation many and various ways of solving some of these problems. There seems to be one solution to which we all in time return. That is education. After all, it is ignorance in most cases which causes crime or disorder.

CHECKS VANDAL SPIRIT.

"Education is received in two ways —the academic trace of it through the schools and the great teacher, 'Experience.' Had some parents paid a little more attention to the training of their boys there would have been less vandalism than we have recently seen in the streets of Boston. Boys usually travel in 'gangs.' The youngest member will be in the ways of the older ones, and so it passes on from generation to generation.

"The most fruitful work of educators deals with the growing boy. It is between the years of twelve and sixteen that his character assumes a definite mold. Therefore it is during these years that we must put the young boy in his proper environment and give him the proper influence. In other words, give him every opportunity to make of himself a man 100 per cent. American.

"The Boy Scout movement is merely in its infancy, but it certainly has established itself as a very potential influence as a character builder for the youth of today. Here the boy is taken away from the seamy and sordid environment (if he happens to live in a congested city district) and given a thorough all round education in the open air which is bound to have a powerful effect in making a man out of him—big man in the real sense of the word.

BOYS NEED LEADERS.

"Today the Boy Scouts of America are ready to receive applicants, but it is handicapped owing to the lack of scout leaders. Just as 75 per cent. of the public service work of today is done by the citizen as an expression of his obligation and duty to his community, so do the scouts of North Scout leader. He works without remuneration, but he knows he is doing something definitely constructive, namely, the building up of American manhood.

"The American Legion today is full of the right type of men for this sort of work. Men who have tasted real disciplins and have been in close contact with human nature and all conditions. Let all young men who have any red blood in their veins and real punch in them volunteer for this work and our citizenship for the future will be on a far more solid basis and we will not have to appoint vigilance committees and have nights of terror any more. Those willing to undertake this work should write at once to Edward S. Roche, Scout Executive, First Boston District, Room 1101, 453 Washington street, Boston, Mass."

NEWLY TRAINED SONG LEADERS DINE TONIGHT

Arrangements are completed for the banquet to be given by song leaders, members of the summer training school, which has been in operation at the Lecture Hall of the Boston Public Library since last August under the direction of Bertron Humphrey, Musical Director of Boston War Camp Community Service.

The banquet is to take place this evening at the Twentieth Century Club, Joy street, Boston, at 6.30 p. m. A special feature of the entertainment planned for the banquet is that each leader in training school shall perform some stunt as his part of the evening's program.

SEARCH IN VAIN FOR MISSING MAN

West Dennis, Oct. 6.—Efforts to locate Charles Wergsser, eighty-eight years old, missing since Saturday morning, have been unavailing. Over 100 men and boys have searched this vicinity in vain.

McCORMACK IN ANNIVERSARY CONCERT

Irish Tenor, Introduced to Boston 10 Years Ago, Adds to Record of Triumphs

John McCormack added another triumph to his long list at his Sunday afternoon concert in Symphony Hall, his first appearance this season. Incidentally the concert had especial significance for the Irish tenor, for it was the tenth anniversary of his first appearance before a Boston audience.

It also recalled to officials at Symphony Hall that on every occasion on which Mr. McCormack has sung in Boston the standing room only" sign has had to be hung out. This was the case at the tenor's latest appearance and a great many who had hoped to hear him could not gain admission to the hall.

With characteristic generosity, Mr. McCormack, who was in fine voice, gave encore after encore, his selections covering a wide range. The singer made a new departure by including in his program a negro spiritual melody, "Go Down, Moses," and which showed Mr. McCormack's voice in a new phase of its versatility.

One of his encore items was "The Americans Come," which he sang in response to a request of Colonel Edward L. Logan, one of a party which occupied a box in front of the parterre. Another interested listener was George Hamlin, tenor with the Chicago Grand Opera Company during the intermission he had a chat with the Irish singer.

Mr. McCormack sang in all twenty-four songs. He opened with two selections from Handel and in response to an encore sang "Where'er You Walk" by the same composer. Another encore was "The Sensitive Plant" by Charles Marshall, composer of the popular "I Hear You Calling Me" which Mr. McCormack sang at the end of his program, closing with "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms."

Other selections were:

"O Lake, Lovely Lake" Queen's Her Happy Tread," "The Red Rose Whispers of Passion," "A Birthday," "The Lord," "Sometimes I Feel Like a Motherless Child," "Bedouin Love Song," Irish Folk Songs, "Green Hills of Eire O'er," "Song of the Fairy King," "Trottin' to the Fair," "Una Baun," "Ave Maria," "Down in Piverdy" and "Mother Machree."

Mr. McCormack was assisted by Winston Wilkinson, violinist, who was encored several times, and by Edwin Schneidler, pianist.

Mr. McCormack's next appearance in Boston will be on Sunday afternoon, December 7, at Symphony Hall.

B. U. GIRLS' GLEE CLUB HOLD FIRST REHEARSAL

Songsters at Boston University are now finishing their caroling again. The first rehearsal of the Girls' Glee Club of the College of Liberal Arts was held today under the direction of Professor John Patton Marshall, who during the war, was musical aide to the commander of the Northeastern Department.

Miss Glenn Wheeler, of Somerville, who has a rich soprano voice, is leader, with Miss Louise Sullivan, of Bay State road, business manager. Miss Ruth McAllister, of Auburndale, was chosen pianist.

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE BOSTON AMERICAN OCTOBER 6, 1919 BOSTON

Work of Societies for Men Returning From War

A report of the work in Boston of the Knights of Columbus, in behalf of the men returning from the war, is interesting. We quote only part of it, but it indicates the character of the service by the Knights of Columbus in this:

When these lads began to flock into the city and the industrial conditions existing were most unsatisfactory, Director Daniel J. Sullivan of the K. of C. War Activities Committee inaugurated in Boston and vicinity a drive for jobs for service men. In a period of six weeks the canvassers in the employ of the Knights found 8,610 opportunities for employment—8,610 jobs open to men who could qualify. To fill these places 5,956 men were referred to employers. Out of this number, 3,565 men were actually hired and placed at work. Altogether 6,424 men registered for positions. It was impossible to get men qualified to fill 1,998 jobs open to the veterans of the world war. As time goes on the accomplishments of the bureau have vastly increased. Placing 100 men at work in a day is becoming quite common.

The educational work among the soldiers has produced highly satisfactory results—so has entertainment.

The labors of the Knights of Columbus, Salvation Army, Red Cross and the Y. M. C. A. and other similar organizations is an extension of the social function greatly needed, not only in time of war, but in peace. It is a recognition long needed that none of us can say, "We are not our brother's keeper."

Conry's Fitness for Office of Attorney-General

We publish below a letter to one of our contemporaries from ex-Congressman Joseph A. Conry, Democratic candidate for attorney-general. The letter is as follows:

To the Editor of the Herald:

Your top-line editorial this morning indicates the existence of considerable worry as to the financial affairs of the city. "Must Get More Revenue" is just as true of the city and State as of the individual. The expenditures of the city and State are not merely increasing—they are bounding upward at a furious pace.

It is rumored that the members of the new police force will be paid far in excess of their luckless predecessors, who, apparently, are to be made the victims of an impending political campaign.

While the State is casting about looking for an increased revenue, why not reach out and accept that which is at hand? I have just returned from a visit to Washington, where I had a delightful interview with the Secretary of the Navy and Admiral Parks, chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks. I find that there is available a large sum of money (considerably more than $4,000,000) to be paid to Massachusetts just as soon as the drydock at South Boston is completed. In addition to this substantial sum, which the Navy Department is anxious to get rid of, there is also available for immediate expenditure a half-million dollars to be used for building shops on the land adjoining the drydock just as soon as the title to the land is vested in the United States.

Can the Herald interest the Chamber of Commerce and encourage business organizations to co-operate with the State authorities and hasten the completion of the work on the drydock in order that we may secure the benefits of this money?

This whole drydock business has been full of mystery and intrigue, and bad business all around. If the character of Mr. Conry's capacity to serve the State as attorney-general can be measured by his service to the State while a member of the port directors in dealing with this drydock question he would make a rare attorney-general indeed, for time has demonstrated the wisdom of all his opinions and actions concerning this drydock problem. He dared to stand alone against experts and alleged business specialists in opposing all the things which events have demonstrated to have been serious mistakes.

Sec. Daniels and the Irish

A representative of the American was greatly astonished to see published in one of its contemporaries a scurrilous attack upon the Irish-American people which appeared in the newspaper owned by Secretary of the Navy Daniels. It was in the form of a letter to the editor. It was one of those typical British lick-spittle, boot-licking things in which America was advised to be very contented with such protection as Great Britain could give her on the seas and everywhere else. The letter spoke of the Irish and negro problem about as a British tory would speak of it.

Now, any one who knows Secretary Daniels knows that he has no such views, but would despise them utterly. No finer Democrat lives than Josephus Daniels, left to his own resources. We know how strongly he has advocated Ireland's cause publicly and privately and how eagerly he advocated a navy which should be greater than England's in reply to England's refusal to accede to the principle of the freedom of the seas.

So, it was in great confidence that we inquired of Mr. Daniels concerning this letter and received from him the following reply:

Editor Boston American:

I thank you for sending me the copy from the Boston Post. I have never seen the article to which you refer. This was a communication to the News and Observer and I dare say the editor of the paper, who is fully responsible for what goes into the paper and has been since I have been Secretary of the Navy, never himself read it until it appeared. The views expressed, of course, are not those entertained by me. On the contrary, my admiration of the Irish, my sympathy with their long effort for home rule and my admiration for the courage and patriotism of thousands of them who served in the army and navy during the world war, make it impossible for me to approve any statement so greatly at variance with my views and my sense of justice to that great people.

JOSEPHUS DANIELS.

We believe that if Mr. Daniels were not a member of the cabinet he would be fighting that portion of the League of Nations which puts another chain around Ireland's neck.

Letters to the Editor

Taxation

Editor Boston American:

It is with considerable satisfaction that I notice that the press and public are beginning to give serious consideration to the taxation question, and that in your editorial of September 25 you open your editorial page to your readers to discussions of this vital question.

While I am not a constant reader of your columns, permit me to say that I am heartily in favor of taxation in proportion to the ability to bear taxation. This to my mind was what most people thought the country was getting when the income tax law was passed.

It is my opinion, however, that the particular income tax laws under which we are taxed accomplish this original purpose only in a defective manner, and that in their operation they give rise to several evil by-products which shortly will cause these laws to be superseded by more equitable and less expensive laws.

Among the evil by-products to which I refer that are engendered by our present income tax law I note the following from an article in Industry of September 6, 1919, entitled "The Income Tax and the High Cost of Living," by W. C. Gray, C. P. A.:

"It is necessary in administering the present income tax schemes to convey to the Revenue Bureau absolute autocratic powers, which they in part have already received and which they are seeking to enlarge.

"A recent address by the commissioner of internal revenue suggests the establishment of a tribunal resembling the Customs Court. He describes the Advisory Tax Board as a separate and impartial appellate body composed of specialists in economics, law, accounting, business and governmental administration. Apparently the commissioner here attempts to have us believe that he does not consider this body sufficient to reduce litigation, and to expedite cases taken to court, he suggesting that a separate and permanent internal revenue division be created in the Department of Justice similar to the Customs Court.

"A recent Treasury Department announcement states:

"'The Advisory Tax Board will be dissolved at the end of September by reason of fulfilment of its functions and the development of the income tax unit of the Internal Revenue Bureau.' (Apparently the commissioner desires a court under his control.)

"How long will the public stand for a taxation scheme that puts them under the autocratic control of the Treasury Department?

"'Under our American system of government, courts are established to protect civil liberty from passion, from mob control and from improper assumption of power by public authorities and public agents.'

This single objection should be sufficient to abolish the existing law, for, as you have always pointed out in your editorials, the mere conception of an irresponsible autocracy in our country is utterly abhorrent to our American ideals, so that when it is realized that this autocracy already exists and, true to its type, is seeking to enlarge and succeeding in enlarging its powers, then will the end of this income tax law be in sight.

HARRY OBER.

Y. D. Uniforms

Editor Boston American:

Just a line in regard to members of the State Guard wearing reclaimed Y. D. uniforms, that I understand may be purchased on Atlantic avenue. We men who represented the 26th Division in all her glories and hardships have objections to offer, not that we would refrain from doing the police work, but on the ground of misrepresentation, it being that we hold all things pertaining to our division as too sacred to be worn or used as a lever to gain public favor.

HOLDS WIFE WORTH MORE THAN THRONE

Prince Carol of Rumania considers his wife, although of humble origin, of more value than the throne of his country; he refuses to give her up. He has renounced the crown, in spite of the entreaties of his heroic mother, and intends to live the simple life with his charming bride. Read his story in the magazine section of next week's

MR. OTTO H. Kahn,
CARE KUHN, Loeb & Co.
NEW YORK City.
MY DEAR Otto.
THE OTHER day.
I MET In New York.
AN OLD friend of mine.
BY THE name of Tom Dyer.
AND WE were sitting around.
IN THE hotel lobby.
AND EACH of us.
WAS TELLING the other.
HOW WELL we had done.
AND WE were bragging.
AND GETTING careless.
ABOUT WHAT we were saying.
AND TOM said.
"I'VE NOTICED in your column.
"OUT IN California.
"THAT ONCE in a while.
"YOU WRITE a letter.
"TO OTTO H. Kahn.
"AND FELLAS like that.
"DO YOU know them all?"
AND THERE I was.
SITTING in the lobby.
OF A big hotel.
AND WHEN Tom first knew me.
I WAS living on an island.
IN A rainy country.
OUT ON the Pacific.
AND I kept on bragging.
AND BEING careless.
AND I said I did.
AND THEN I told him
ABOUT THE wonderful place.
YOU HAVE on Long Island.
WHICH I know about.
BECAUSE TONY Soper.
POINTED IT out.
FROM A Long Island train.
AND THE way I told it.
TOM GOT an idea.
THAT MOST of my week-ends.
ARE SPENT with you.
AND THEN Maybelle came.
AND TOM told her.
HOW I knew Otto Kahn.
AND HOW we are friends.
AND ABOUT your place.
AND MAYBELLE said.
SHE HAD read all about it.
AND WOULD give most anything.
IF SHE could drive through it.
AND WOULD I take her.
AND I ask you, Otto.
WHAT WAS I to do?
AND I said I would.
AND TOMORROW morning.
I'M GOING to get my car.
AND WE'RE going to start out.
AND GO down to Long Island.
AND ON the Jericho road.
AND WHEN we get to your place.
WHERE THE big gate is.
I'LL HAVE to turn in.
AND ALL I want you to do.
IS TO tell your hired men.
WHEN THEY see a green car.
WITH WHITE wire wheels.
AND THE driver of the car.
WEARING A flat green hat.
AND LOOKING scared.
IF YOU'LL tell them, please.
NOT TO throw him out.
AND IF they could act.
LIKE THEY'D seen me before.
I'D BE tickled to death.
AND, OF course, I'll promise.
NOT TO stop at the house.

I THANK YOU.

THE BIG "I" A TERRIBLE TYRANT OF TALK

By Mrs. Wilson Woodrow

"NO, I have never met her," I overheard one woman saying to another. "What is she like?"

"Oh, very nice," replied her companion in a voice without any thrill of enthusiasm. "Too much big 'I' and little 'You,' though."

The phrase caught my fancy. It expresses so perfectly a certain type of person. I suppose it is in common usage, but I never happened to have heard it before.

At once I mentally added a new chapter to that book I am going to write some day, "People Who Have Bored Me."

I could visualize that woman perfectly. Everything she possesses, clothes, furniture, husband, children, cat, dog or chicken, is a little better than the things which belong to others—for the sole reason that it is hers. She takes it for granted that everything she says, does, thinks or feels is of more importance than the sayings, doings, thoughts or feelings of other people, "the lesser breeds without the law."

Sun Selves in Own Favor

There are a lot of her parading up and down the world, sunning themselves in their own favor.

If she has a new hat, although it may be the season for new hats and they are as thick as blackberries in August, she holds you up while she explains what a rare and precious acquisition it is.

"Just look at the quality of the velvet," she will say. "And the feathers. You don't often see anything like them."

You may have on a new hat yourself, that you do not think is so bad; but she passes it over in silence and with a pitying glance.

If she is with one or a dozen she always improves the occasion by delivering a lecture on where she has been and what she has been doing. No one cares a straw, but she keeps right on.

Not long ago a woman who is a widow was talking to me and fell into a confidential strain. She said: "I am lonely. I would like to marry again, but although I know a number of nice men whom I see a good deal of not one of them says: 'Will you be mine?'"

I could have told her why right off the bat, only I didn't. I knew it would not be taken in good part.

She is good-looking, she dresses well and has a number of accomplishments; but she is an unconquerable egotist. She first tries to dazzle a man with her gifts—oh, fatal mistake!—and then, even on short acquaintance, she begins to talk about herself continuously, steadily. There is only one theme which holds her interest for a minute—I, Me, Myself.

A Fixed Idea

She has a fixed idea that she is "not like other girls," and she discusses her impulses and emotions, her peculiarities of mind and heart, until the poor, tired listener wishes that she would go out and hang herself or that he could perform that job for her.

A busy doctor, who is a bachelor and, therefore, much pursued, said to me bitterly:

"I've struck. I take my amusements alone now. When my day's work is over I am tired and I want an hour or so of rest and recreation. Formerly I would frequently call up some woman friend and ask her to go out to dinner with me, but they always seemed to think that because I was a doctor I would be interested in their new symptoms or else in their troubles. I hear nothing but symptoms and troubles all day long and I should think that my friends might realize that I would like to get away from them occasionally."

Most of us have symptoms and troubles more or less, but when we seek diversion it is to forget them, and how gladly we welcome the person in whose conversation the big "I" does not continually lurk, ready to pop up and frighten us out of our enjoyment.

That big "I" is a terrible tyrant. He shuts you up in a little prison of yourself, away from sympathy and understanding and friendship and all of the things that make life worth while.

Yourself you have always with you. So when you go out or others come to you it is a good plan to shut the big "I" up in the closet and take genuine interest in little "You."

MYSTERY OF MATTER AS TOLD BY EXPERT

By Garrett P. Serviss.

"Weight being defined as the measure of the force with which bodies tend toward the earth's centre, it would seem that matter of itself has no weight. If so, is it logical to conclude that the terrestrial globe is a mass without weight?" M. G. A."

"WEIGHT" is a fact of experience familiar to everybody; "mass" is a fact of inference, something like an "axiom." For ordinary purposes the idea of weight covers that of mass. In truth, we must usually translate mass into weight before we can have a "realizing sense" of what we are talking about.

But, while the conception underlying the word mass can be expressed for practical uses in terms of weight, yet, in itself, it carries the mind into the region of ideality. For the physicist mass is the "quantity of matter" that any body contains but ask him what he means by quantity of matter and how he measures it and you will drive him into abstractions. He will tell you, perhaps, that mass is "a coefficient of inertia." "What is inertia, then?" you ask. If that question were asked by a lawyer, one of the sort who insists upon "yes or no," with no qualifications or explanations, the physicist would have some trouble in satisfying his questioner or in clarifying the minds of the jurymen.

Newton's "First Law"

Inertia is usually defined in terms of Newton's "First Law of Motion," which says, in brief, that a moving body keeps on uniformly moving and a motionless body remains motionless unless compelled by some force to do otherwise. Now, the greater the resistance to change, i. e., inertia, the greater the mass. In common speech we would say that it takes more force to move, or to stop, a heavy body than a lighter one, if the velocity is in both cases the same.

But, if you ask an astronomer what mass is, he will reply that it is a "coefficient of attraction," and a demand for particulars will lead into other more or less abstract conceptions. But, at bottom, the definition of the physicist and that of the astronomer are identical.

Now, coming back to "weight," why are not scientists content to use that term alone, without dragging in "mass," for, if mass can be expressed by weight, what is the use of having two words for the same thing? Well, the trouble is that weight is not a constant quantity, while mass is constant—or, at least, until quite recently it has been thought to be constant. Therefore, mass and weight are, after all, not the same.

Mass, in the usual scientific sense, is always and everywhere invariable. Anywhere in the wide universe, according to this conception, a body having a mass equivalent to the weight of one pound on the earth's surface would continue to have exactly the same mass, although its weight would vary enormously in different places.

Variations in Weight

On the moon its weight would be about one-sixth of a pound, on the sun it would weigh nearly twenty-eight pounds. Four thousand miles above the earth's surface its weight would be reduced to one-quarter of a pound. Four million miles from the earth the weight, measured by the earth's attraction on it, would be but one-millionth of a pound. Yet, in all these various situations its mass, or quantity of matter, would be exactly the same.

Take the earth itself. It has a mass equivalent to six sextillion tons, calculated in terms of the earth's own surface gravity. But its weight varies according to the mass and distance of the body to whose attraction the weight is due. Thus, the sun attracts the earth, and consequently gives it a certain weight, measureable in terms of the sun's gravitation. This solar weight of the earth amounts to about 1-1600th of its terrestrial weight, or say three-and-three-quarter quintillion tons.

But, now listen to this, and see what mysteries we are dealing with—and inquisitive science herself plunges us into them. Reason has lately been found for thinking that mass varies with the velocity of the matter to which it appertains, in such ratio that if a body could travel as fast as light its mass would become infinite!
